'MYSTERY' WOMAN TO AID GIN SLAYER

Today

Bed Rock Prices.
A Russian Surprise.
Death by Proxy.
Strange Hindu Killing.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

MERCHANTS ARE interested in this.

In the Chicago Herald and Examiner, yesterday, Marshall Field & Co., with an advertisement filling three pages, announced prices "considerably less than at the end of the deflated period of 1920-21."

The announcement, called by Marshall Field a "price decennial," guaranteed every special value advertised at a lower price, quality for quality, than similar merchandise 10 years ago.

Frederick B. Corley, vice president and merchandising manager of Marshall Field, believes that the announcement of the great Chicago firm will act as a spur to buying and benefit trade in all directions.

There is no doubt that merchandise prices have reached the bottom.

HERE IS a change with a vengeance. Put your hand upon your mouth, as poor old Job said, for you are going to be surprised.

C. W. Gilbert, of Washington, who labors in Mr. Curtis' vineyard, learns that the United States has changed its mind and believes that the Russian five-year plan will succeed. Furthermore, he says trade relations with Russia are likely to be established and American money lent to Russia to let her government carry on its development program without being compelled to dump products at prices ruinous to the industries and farmers of other nations.

It really looks as though Uncle Sam were coming out of his Rip Van Winkle sleep and Frankenstein nightmare as regards Russia.

TALK ABOUT putting an embargo on everything Russian is dying out. Perhaps somebody in our intelligent government remembered that Japan and Thibet, once lands of embargoes, didn't do well until they opened their gates. Also, American industry became alarmed when oil men asked an embargo on oil, and tobacco men asked an embargo on Sumatra wrappers, and copper men said it would be a good idea to keep out all foreign copper.

Circulation of the blood is no more important to the body than circulation of products to the nations of the world.

THE STRANGE death of a young Hindu scholar, Sant Ran Pande, 31 years old, interests detectives in California. Pande left the University of California to investigate the murders of 13 of his countrymen in the Sacramento Valley. Recently his body was found, minus the head, fastened to a tractor wheel, in the Sacramento River.

Detectives think he was decapitated by thuggees of Northern India, worshipers of the black goddess Kali, transplanted to far-off California.

That may be true or not. What interests Americans is the fact that three Hindus charged with the crime admit that they came into the United States illegally.

Bootlegging of Asiatic and other emigrants is even more profitable than alcoholic bootlegging.

GOOD NEWS from Europe tells of an increasing demand for automobiles, which will mean more employment for workers in the United States.

Makers and buyers of automobiles are interested in other news, only rumor as yet, which says that one of the big manufacturers will deliver cars hereafter with no charge for freight anywhere.

This will make a difference to buyers and to manufacturers. The latter make a considerable profit on freight charges, running into millions a year, because automobiles are shipped knocked down, and freight charges are approximately what it would cost to ship a car sitting up on its four wheels.

THE CITY of New York is fighting the attempt of Mr. Craig, able lawyer and formerly city comptroller, to collect $350,000 for legal fees. What Craig did was to prevent an increase in subway, elevated and surface carfare that would have cost the people of the City of New York at least $20,000,000 a year.

It is hard to collect when you serve the people, easy to if you serve corporations. How much do you think one of them would pay Craig to save them 20 millions a year?

IN ENGLAND, when judge and jury agree that a man has committed murder, they hang him and waste no time about it. The criminals know that, and murders are few.

Yesterday, British justice hanged Alfred Arthur Rouse, who tried to "die by proxy." He murdered a man, so the jury said, put the corpse in his (Rouse's) car, and set fire to the car. The prosecution never discovered the dead man's name. It was a matter of circumstantial evidence. But there was the dead body, and Rouse, and the evidence. And yesterday Rouse was hanged, protesting that he was innocent, which, undoubtedly, he was not.

IN THIS COUNTRY, we would have had at least a year to think it over, with the regulation appeals and postponements, and he would probably have escaped with brief imprisonment or none.

The British are thorough. We have more than 20 murders for every one of theirs.

BURBRIDGE COLEMAN, of Franklin, Md., believed to be 115 years old, was near death yesterday. His sons are past 70, his two wives have long been dead, and no wonder. One of them had 21 children, the other 12.

WOMAN MAY SAVE 'GIN SLAYER'

New Evidence Revealed, Says Kirkland's Counsel; Will Ask New Trial or Appeal

VALPARAISO, Ind., March 11.—(AP.)—Attorneys for Virgil Kirkland, found guilty of the murder of Arlene Draves, his 18-year-old sweetheart, at a drinking party, announced today they had uncovered new evidence from a woman witness to the tragedy which would be presented in their appeal for a new trial to save the youngster from life imprisonment.

Barratt O'Hara, chief of defense counsel, said the evidence an investigator had uncovered was of such a nature that a new trial would "clear Kirkland entirely."

WON'T NAME WOMAN

He refused to name the woman and would not reveal the nature of the evidence, saying:

"It was too late yesterday, when the investigator telephoned, to use the evidence in the trial, but within the next 30 days, as allowed by law, a tion for a new trial will be be made.

"If Judge Crumpacker does not grant a new trial we will appeal. I am confident the verdict will be set aside because it was found on the weakest count of the indictment—assault and battery with the fist. In any further litigation attack will be out entirely. The only question at stake will be whether Kirk-

COYNE BILL PASSED BY ASSEMBLY

Mayor Kline 'Lobbies' for Measure; Pinchot Has 10 Days to Sign or Veto It

By ED PRENDERGAST
Staff Correspondent.

HARRISBURG, March 11.—With Mayor Charles H. Kline smiling in his most affable manner, the Coyne bill, which provides for two additional judges in Allegheny County, passed the House today.

The bill already had been passed by the Senate and now goes to the Governor, who has 10 days to sign or veto it.

The vote was 124 to 4. Only one member of the Allegheny County delegation opposed it, Representative C. C. Baldridge, of Edgewood, who asserted:

"This bill is for the purpose of paying political debts."

KLINE FINDS "FRIENEDS"

Before the vote, in old-time fashion, Mayor Kline strolled up and down the aisles, shaking hands with members and declaring:

"I didn't realize I had so many friends up here."

For several hours, the Mayor and Senator James J. Coyne sat in the House caucus room, where a parade of representatives passed by and met him. Little was said about the Coyne bill openly, but it was understood that the Mayor quietly suggested that he'd appreciate their votes for it.

City Solicitor Charles Waldeschmidt and former Judge Frank Golmar are said to be the leading candidates for the appointments.

LITTLE ARGUMENT

There was little argument over the bill, which a few days ago was considered to have lost some support due to last week's protest of Allegheny County independents. Representative Edward B. Goehring stood up, told the House about the need of such judges, and a vote was called.

The Mayor had done his work well and put on a show as dramatic as any since the days of Penrose.

A choice discussion was reported between Kline and Representative Darlington Hoopes, a Socialist member from Berks County.

Hoopes asked Kline:

"If I vote for your bill, will you have me arrested when I speak in Pittsburgh like you did Jim Maurer?"

The Mayor is quoted as answering:

"When you speak in Pittsburgh, you can have the best spot in the town."

Maurer, public safety director of Reading, was arrested in Pittsburgh a few months ago during an unemployment demonstration.

BLUE LAW FOES GO TO CAPITAL

A special train will carry more than 300 amateur sport fans when various Pittsburgh representatives journey to Harrisburg Tuesday for the public hearing on Representative M. A. Musmanno's Sunday blue law modification bill before the House committee.

The special train will carry supporters for the state-wide referendum at the November election from Western Pennsylvania as far east as Altoona. William S. Haddock, president of the Allegheny Mountain Association of the A. A. U., announced members of that organization will be represented on the special train which will leave the Pennsylvania Station at 8:30 a. m.

GROUPS REPRESENTED

Separate delegations will attend the hearing to represent other Pittsburgh groups. The Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, which has indorsed the movement for modification of the Blus laws, will be represented by two committee groups, Manager Donald J. BLAMES VICE IN CITY ON MAYOR

Executive Bosses Police, Directed Purchases, Says Former Morals Magistrate

Laying vice conditions and graft at the door of the Kline administration, A. D. Brandon, deposed magistrate of Morals Court, in an address to the Harwood School Parent-Teachers' Association, Sheraden, last night, made the following declarations:

1—That Bertram L. Succop, discharged director of supplies, was the Kline administration "goat"—that he couldn't favor even "his own friends" and was acting on orders from the mayor's office.

2—That ward chairmen dictate the policies of the Pittsburgh Police Department, interfere with prosecutions and control of patrolmen on the beat as well as "higher-ups" in the Department of Public Safety.

3—That Mayor Charles H. Kline is responsible for vice conditions and that Director of Public Safety James M. Clark cannot but help know what is going on "under his nose," in the protection of speakeasies and other places thriving in the city.

4—That police are afraid to perform their duty in raiding booze joints and disorderly houses without the sanction of their superiors, and in many cases drop prosecution when ordered to "lay off" by the "higher-ups."

Brandon said:

"If Bertram Succop is guilty of anything, he is guilty of taking orders."

"UNDER ORDERS"

He declared the former director of supplies was the "goat" of the Kline administration in the conduct of his office on a so-called "high-bid" policy in the matter of

Pinchot Refuses Reply On Sunday Activities

HARRISBURG, March 11.—Gov. Pinchot today declined to answer questions concerning his personal relations to Blue-Law Sunday.

Asked if he ever played tennis on Sunday, the Governor answered:

"That's the kind of question I never answer."

Again asked:

"When you lived in Washington did you ever attend a motion picture, and was it detrimental to your character?"

He said:

"The same goes for that. It's nobody's business."

The Forester refused to amplify his statement of yesterday before the Lord's Day Alliance, at which time he reiterated his platform in support of the Blue Law.

He was asked today if he would veto a bill that would create local option, or make any change in the existing Sunday laws. His answer was:

"The statement yesterday needs no amplification. I think it's not a good practice to discuss a veto before the bill comes to me."

He said he would be in Scranton next Tuesday when the Blue Law hearing will be held here.

City Linoleum Bill Paid Twice, Controller's Records Indicate

The city apparently has paid twice for the costly linoleum on part of the floor of City Clerk Robert Clark's office, records in the controller's office indicate.

The city paid once for the linoleum when Max Parker received a lump sum of $4,260 for remodeling the office of the city clerk. The cost of the linoleum used was included in that lump sum, the contract specifically states.

Parker evidently was paid again for the floor covering when he billed the city separately for 120 yards of the material at a cost of $360.

Parker is the contractor to whom Public Safety Director James M. Clark awarded the contract for remodeling Central Police Station without advertising for bids.

The contract signed by Parker for the clerk's office remodeling, while it did not specify the extent of floor to be covered, said the cost of the linoleum should not exceed $475. New section of floor newly covered is approximately 120 square yards.

Although the contract stated the floor of the vault was to be covered with the same material, it is not in evidence. The new covering is brick red, while that in

2 FIRMS OPEN CITY'S BOOKS

With additional indignant civic organizations demanding a thorough investigation of charges of irregularities and mismanagement against the administration of Mayor Charles H. Kline, the double audit of the Department of Supplies started today.

Indicating that they planned to delve deep into the situation, M. C. Conick, of Main & Co., representing the Citizens Committee and the League of Women Voters, upon his arrival at the City-County Building to start the audit, asked for the annual reports of the controller's office for the years of 1926 to 1930, inclusive.

TWO FORCES REPORT

Conick, who helped install the present bookkeeping system in the controller's office in 1915, is being assisted by six men. J. C. M. White, of Price, Waterhouse & Co., employed by Controller Kerr, is being aided by two men. The audit which is being conducted in Common Pleas Court Room No. 8, proceeded in the absence of Controller Kerr, who left last night for New York in company of N. R. Criss, chairman of the

Pope Protests Canterbury Visit to Holy Sepulchre

VATICAN CITY, March 11.—(AP.)—Vatican circles learned unofficially that the Holy See has made representations to the British government regarding the situation which might be created in Jerusalem by the proposed visit of the Archbishop of Canterbury on J. P. Morgan's yacht.

The Vatican, it is understood, is not directly opposed to the visit, but pointed out that the visit might be interpreted in Palestine as an Anglican bid for part possession of the Holy Sepulchre, now guarded by four religions—The Roman Catholic, the Greek, the American and the Copt.

It was said that if the archbishop visited the sepulchre it would be necessary to receive him with full honors, thus creating a precedent.

Several years ago the archbishop cancelled a visit to Jerusalem when similar objections arose.

FARR EJECTED FROM STAND AT UTILITIES INVESTIGATION

PROBE HEAD COMMANDS REMOVAL

Ex-Congressman's Refusal To Name Banker Charging 'Collusion' Brings Action

HARRISBURG, March 11 —(AP.)— Former Congressman John R. Farr, of Scranton, was removed from the witness stand by a sergeant at-arms at today's Senate investigation of the Public Service Commission when he again refused to reveal the name of a banker he previously stated had informed him of collusion between Wall street and the State Public Service Commission.

Farr was taken from the stand protesting vigorously to the committee and to the sergeant-at-arms who had been instructed to remove him from the stand.

ORDERED REMOVED

Chairman Earnest ordered him removed when he refused to name the banker he had previously stated had informed him of the existence of a letter from a Wall street firm stating that the Public Service Commission had decided to allow a rate increase to the Scranton Spring-brook Water Company prior to the official handing down of a decision in the case.

The slight gray-haired witness continuously interrupted the questioning of Chairman Earnest, who as repeatedly pounded the gavel and demanded direct answers.

Senator Buckman, Bucks, supplemented Chairman Earnest's last and final order for the removal of Farr with the statement that he should remain in Harrisburg until the committee decided what to do in his case.

Spectators inferred that this meant contempt proceedings would be instituted against the former congressman and former Speaker of the State House of Representatives.

JAIL POSSIBLE

Under the state laws Farr could be called before the bar of the Senate and if he refused to answer could be placed in the Dauphin County jail indefinitely. Another law provides for fine and imprisonment or both after indictment and conviction in the Dauphin County courts for contempt of the Senate.

Farr told newspapermen later that if he replied to the committee questions it would "ruin the banker and wreck the bank."

Before the dramatic climax to his testimony arrived, Farr had told the committee that Judge John S. Fine of Luzerne County, in a political speech, had charged that Commissioner James S. Benn had asked John M. Hemphill, Liberal and Democratic candidate for Governor, to talk about municipal ownership of water companies in Lackawanna County.

GIRLS VICTIMS OF JOB FAKE

A fake employment scheme by which 40 girls were victimized was reported in Central Police Court today by city detectives, who named O. J. Booth, 40, as the perpetrator.

Booth, former Pittsburgh agent for the Shaughnessy Knitting Company, of Watertown, N. Y., was held for court on charges of false pretense, forgery and fraudulent conversion. Detectives testified he not only assessed the girls $5 each for jobs he never supplied but, after being discharged by the knitting company, sold the McKeesport territory rights for the products to three persons for $100 each.

Two of those three, William M. Blakely, of Crafton, and Virgil Whitacre, of McKeesport, testified against Booth today. It was on complaint from them that Booth was arrested in Lorain, O., on March 7. The third person, an unnamed woman, was said to be ill.

The charge of forgery was based on testimony that Booth indorsed two checks totaling $50 made out to the knitting company. The detectives today were trying to get in touch with the 40 unemployed girls to have them identify Booth.

Gas Tax Change Proposed in House

HARRISBURG, March 11— The administration bill for collection of the gasoline tax of 3 cents a gallon at the source was introduced in the House by Representative Bidelspacher, Lycoming, chairman of the House Roads Committee. A similar effort failed in the Legislature two years ago.

End of Death Penalty In State Proposed

HARRISBURG, March 11— Representative Joseph Lynch, of Pittsburgh, today introduced into the House a bill to abolish the death penalty in Pennsylvania. Capital punishment, the law that claimed Irene Shrader and Glenn Dague, would be repealed by Lynch's bill.

The bill, in the form of an amendment, provides that every person convicted of first degree murder shall be sentenced to undergo imprisonment for life and not otherwise.

The amendment also wipes out the places of execution, the appropriation for such procedure, and repeals all laws inconsistent. The murder jury now decides whether first degree conviction merits death or life imprisonment.

Provisions of Lynch's bill would not apply to crimes committed prior to the date the act took effect.

HOSPITAL SITE HERE UPHELD

HARRISBURG, March 11— Legislation to permit the state to accept a gift from the University of Pittsburgh of a site for a state psychiatric hospital has been introduced by Senator Frank J. Harris, of Crafton.

The university plans to contribute a site on its campus for a hospital adjacent to the growing medical center in Oakland. The Harris bill carries an appropriation of $25,000 for preparation of plans for a hospital to accommodate 150 patients and at least 200 visits a day from out patients.

Senator James J. Coyne is sponsor of an amendment to the compensation act giving injured employes hospital service for 45 days instead of 30 at cost of the employer. It permits hospitals giving such service to present their claims to the Compensation Board.

Coyne also sponsored an administration measure permitting a hospital to obtain a lien against property of accident victims it accommodates.

The Coyne bill fixing $8,000 as the salary of the Pittsburgh city controller has been reported to the Senate. It will be before the Upper House for final action Tuesday.

Fascists Hurl Ink Bottles in Fight

MUNICH, Bavaria, March 11— (AP.)— Ink bottles and ash trays were used as missiles by Fascist members of the city parliament in an attack on Peoples party deputies during debate last night.

After a fist fight the session was closed. The Peoples party deputies did not share the Fascist views on a measure under discussion.

Lady Vivien Decies Leaves $750,000

NEW YORK, March 11— (AP.)— Lady Vivien Decies, the former Vivien Gould, left an estate of not more than $750,000. This was disclosed when permission was given in court for payment of $37,500 for education and maintenance of her three children pending settlement of the estate.

44-HOUR WEEK BILL ARGUED

HARRISBURG, March 11— (AP.)— Two pieces of labor legislation pending in the State Senate were granted a public hearing yesterday and were attacked by employers as unsound economically and upheld by employes and social agencies as necessary for the health and happiness of women and children.

The measures were the Coyne bill to provide a 44-hour working week and an eight-hour day for women, and the Salus bill to provide a 45-minute lunch period daily for all employed minors under 18 years of age.

A third measure considered was the Frazier bill to extend jurisdiction of juvenile courts to minors under 18 years of age instead of the present age of 16 and to include all felonies in this jurisdiction. There was no protest against this bill.

CITY CONTRACT BILL HELD UP

HARRISBURG, March 11— (AP.)— The House Committee on Cities postponed action for a week on the Rhodes bill to permit third class cities to make public improvements costing more than $500 on a day-labor basis instead of by contract.

Representatives of McKeesport, Duquesne and Clairton urged favorable action on the ground they would be unable to comply with provisions of the Pittsburgh Plan for the relief of unemployment unless permitted to engage in public improvements on a day-labor instead of the contract basis. They cited that boroughs and townships are not restricted to the contract system.

Speakers in behalf of contractors' organizations and individuals attacked the measure as uneconomic and in opposition to the principle that government should not compete with business.

Discussion hinged on a recent Supreme Court decision that public improvements costing more than $500 in third class cities must be let by contract. It was testified a number of cities were disregarding this ruling and subjecting themselves to the possibility of surcharges.

PINCHOT TO SET POLICE BILL PARLEY

Intimates Own Measure May Be Changed; To Discuss Provisions at Conference

By ED PRENDERGAST
Staff Correspondent

HARRISBURG, March 11 —Gov. Pinchot today said he would call a conference of those for and against his coal and iron police bill soon, and thrash out their differences.

He admitted that the bill as submitted Monday night in the House, and under fire yesterday from many sources may not be the same bill later inferring that amendments that were deemed necessary would not be unwelcome.

The bill sets up a second state police system called the industrial police, which gives members the rights not only of police, but as well constables, which does not restrict them to company's property, which calls for payment of them by the state, the money to be reimbursed by the companies, and which would allow units as great as 500.

BILL CRITICIZED

The bill was criticized yesterday in the public hearing on the Musmanno bill by Representative M. A. Musmanno, Pat Fagan, mine union leader, and others as completely unsatisfactory.

Musmano, whose own bill would reduce the powers of the coal and iron to "properly watchmen" termed the Governor's bill "shocking."

Father James R. Cox, while submitting that the Governor would keep his platform promise, and sign any bill that would accomplish that end, supported the Musmano measure.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., March 11—Harry W. Wahlstrom, youthful leaf mould fertilizer salesman, was being held here today while authorities checked his movements on the day that Virginia Brooks, 10 year-old girl, was kidnaped. Investigators ordered his arrest after traces of leaf mould were found in the barley sacks in which the girl's body had been placed.

Fourteen eccentrics also were rounded up for questioning, including a feeble-minded boy, aged 18, whose name was not given. He was said to have had a number of burlap sacks identical with those used to wrap the girl's body. The sacks were found in the boy's trunk, police said.

The girl's mutilated and decapitated body was found in a burlap bag on lonely Camp Kearney mesa.

HUNT 'HERMIT'

Authorities were concentrating their attention on a clue offered by a nearby resident, who said he had seen a man whom he described as "a hermit" escort the Brooks girl to school a few days before her disappearance on February 11.

Dr. S. E. Toomey, autopsy surgeon, said there were no signs of injury previous to death.

Dr. Toomey said that the girl undoubtedly had been dead for many days, possibly since her disappearance on the way to school one month ago.

DOG FINDS SACK

The shapeless sack was not there two days ago when he tramped over the same territory, George H. Moses, a sheepherder, told authorities. It was Moses' dog that discovered the tragedy yesterday.

The child's body was still clad in the clothing she wore when she disappeared, even to the shoes and stockings and light coat.

The gruesome murder and its details recalled to Los Angeles authorities the brutal slaying of Marian Parker, 12-year-old school girl, by William Edward Hickman in 1927. Hickman later was executed in San Quentin penitentiary.

G. O. P. BACKS FESS, LUCAS

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, March 11.— Challenged by the Democrats, bolted by the Progressives and criticized by various other groups within and without the party, the harassed Republican leadership fell back today on that ancient Napoleonic maxim:

"The Old Guard dies (maybe), but it never surrenders."

Senator Simeon D. Fess, of Ohio, will remain as chairman of the Republican National Committee, despite the opposition of Republican wets, who resent his radical dry activities, and his close affiliation with the Anti-Saloon League.

Robert H. Lucas, of Kentucky, is to remain as executive director of party affairs, despite the general demand for his head for circulating Ku Klux Klan propaganda in the last campaign in an effort to defeat Senator George W. Norris in Nebraska.

No olive branch is to be extended to the Progressives, meeting here today in frank revolt.

Pinchot Appoints Erie Canal Board

HARRISBURG, March 11.— (AP.)— Gov. Pinchot announced the appointment of seven persons to comprise the Ohio and Lake Erie Canal Board to promote the building of a canal from the Ohio River to Lake Erie by the federal government.

The appointees follow: Charles C. McGovern, W. Y. English, A. W. Dann, A. B. Shepherd, John B. Eichenauer and W. B. Rodgers, all of Pittsburgh, and Frank Purnell, Youngstown, O.

POWER HELD '32 ISSUE BY NORRIS

Nebraskan Opens Two-Day Progressives' Conference To Map Next Campaign

WASHINGTON, March 11. — (AP.) — The power issue was projected to the fore today by Senator Norris (Rep.), of Nebraska, in opening the two-day conference of Republican and Democratic independents.

The Nebraskan, who fought President Hoover asserted the "combination" controlling the nation's power supply aims to boss both the Republican and Democratic national conventions with a view to fighting the 1932 race "on a false issue."

Norris disclaimed any political purpose in sponsoring the meeting, but warned that "partisanship is one of the greatest evils of a democratic form of government."

ASKS U. S. OPERATION

He rejected President Hoover's proposal for power regulation by the government and demanded federal operation and control of this industry, which he said has organized into "the most gigantic, far-reaching and comprehensive monopoly which has ever been devised by the mind of man."

Reviewing the condition of the nation which prompted the conference, the gray-haired Nebraskan said:

"We believe that your united judgment will go far toward building up a sentiment among the American people which will demand, not only of Congress, but of public officials everywhere, such governmental and humane relief as will bring prosperity again to our country.

"A public sentiment honestly organized and logically managed is the most powerful and influential incentive toward prosperity and happiness."

NO THIRD PARTY

Sponsors of the meeting, he said, were not "moved by any intention or idea of organizing a third or independent party."

Of problems other than power, Norris said little except to mention evils besetting agriculture and labor.

In the afternoon Senator Borah (Rep.), of Idaho, led debate on agriculture. A champion of export debenture as farm relief, he once more advanced ideas which precipitated his disagreement with President Hoover.

Tonight the Progressives intend to discuss means of returning to "representative government." A New Mexico Republican, Senator Cutting, will keynote this subject, contending too many congressmen forget the plain people to legislate for special interests.

The conference will continue through tomorrow. Senator La Follette (Rep.), of Wisconsin, beginning unemployment discussion, and Senator Norris opening power debate. The night session will be devoted to group report and the preparation of an outline for legislative work before the reassembling of Congress.

Jailed in Auto Theft On Trial in Death

Michael Nagy, 25, of City Farm lane, Homestead, was placed on trial in Criminal Court today on a charge of involuntary manslaughter in the death of Virginia M. Coolidge Upholds Long Deliberations of Senate

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., March 11.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

It is always easy to become impatient with the prolonged debates of the Senate. The people tolerate talk but they admire action. Nevertheless it would be dangerous for the Senate further to impair its character as a deliberative body. A good measure can stand discussion. A bad bill ought to be delayed. To give a check upon the popular House of Representatives the Constitution established the Senate to be more permanent, independent and conservative. The House was to protect the people against oppression. The Senate was to protect the people against disorder.

Mr. Coolidge

While the nature of the Senate has been changed by the direct election of its members, it has still remained a citadel of liberty because it has always contained a body of strong men who were able and willing to expose dangerous measures by adequate debate. Their arguments on the floor go to the country through the press. If they have real substance the people respond. Of course the power to debate can be abused. But it is safer to employ those who abuse power in debating than in voting. Open debate is the only shield against the irretrievable action of a rash majority.

ANTI-CRIME SOCIETY ACTS

N. Y. Legislature Urged to Open Inquiry; Churches Appeal to Gov. Roosevelt

By International News Service

NEW YORK, March 11.—A demand for an investigation of the administration of Mayor James J. Walker will be made today in a letter sent to the members of the New York Legislature by the Society for the Prevention of Crime.

The letter, prepared by Samuel Marcus, counsel for the society, of which Howard Clark Barber is superintendent, asks for the appointment of Judge Samuel Seabury as commissioner to make a citywide investigation and to probe the officials acts of the Mayor.

FORMING COMMITTEE

Seabury already has been named by Gov. Roosevelt to investigate the official conduct of District Attorney Crain, of New York.

At the same time formation of a citizens' committee of 1,000 was announced by William Jay Schieffelin, chairman of the Citizens' Union. The purposes of this committee will be to direct public opinion, support the investigation of public corruption launched by the Seabury vice probe and to "inspire confidence" in those who might be willing to aid in an investigation of city affairs, but who fear possible reprisals.

CHURCHES ASK INQUIRY

Congregational churches of the city also added their voice to the appeal to Gov. Roosevelt for an investigation of city government.

At a meeting last night representatives of 32 Congregational churches adopted a resolution calling on the Greater New York Federation of Churches to speak for the Protestant forces of the city against official "untrustworthiness," and to issue a call for a united demand by all creeds for honesty in city government.

Walker Won't Interrupt Vacation at Quiz Threat

KANSAS CITY, March 11.—(INS.)—Mayor James J. Walker, of New York, will not cancel his vacation trip to California and return to Manhattan because of the threat of an investigation of his office in connection with the probe of graft and vice now under way there.

A visitor for three hours here today, Mayor Walker made it clear he had no intention of breaking his first vacation trip in more than a year to return to the metropolis.

When the New York investigation was called to his attention, he said:

"Why should I return? They have investigated everyone else in New York, and I might just as well be in the swim."

PART OF THE FUN, FOR IT IS FUN: A THRILLING SPILL NEAR THE BOTTOM OF THE HILL AFTER A LONG, COLD SLIDE

PLOT HINTED; TO GIVE UP TODAY

'Frame-Up' by Enemies, He Says, to Balk Pringle Case Appeal; Bond Prepared

SAN DIEGO, March 11.—(AP.)—A whirlpool of charges growing out of the investigation of a "love bazar," in which school girls allegedly were procured at high prices for men of wealth, today engulfed Alexander Pantages, theater magnate, who still is fighting a conviction of having attacked Eunice Pringle, young dancer, in August, 1929.

Jesse H. Shreve, prominent San Diego business man; John P. Mills, Los Angeles and San Diego real estate millionaire; William Jobelmann, former publicity agent, and Olive Clark Day were named with Pantages in a complaint issued by District Attorney Thomas Whelan.

The complaint and another charging Shreve, Mills, Jobelmann and the woman with four counts involving a girl, were the outgrowth of an investigation of the activities here of an alleged "girl mart" recently exposed in Los Angeles with the arrest of Mills, Jobelmann and Mrs. Day.

PANTAGES ISSUES DENIAL

Whelan charged Jobelmann and Mrs. Day, alleged operators of the "girl mart," brought Helen Livingston, 17, here from Los Angeles October 30, last, with the assistance of Mills, and that Shreve paid the girl for acting as Pantages' companion during a party in a hotel.

The second complaint charged that Lydia Nitto, 18, another purported "market girl," similarly was brought here by Mills, Shreve, Jobelmann and the woman.

Shreve surrendered and posted $25,000 bond in Justice Court. He denied all the allegations and said he "would like to see the girls named."

Pantages, who was in Agua Caliente, Mexico, with Mrs. Pantages when the charges were filed, said over the telephone that he was innocent. He declared:

"The charges are just dirt dug up by my enemies in an effort to balk my appeal in the Pringle girl case."

The others were not present. Jobelmann was held in jail in Los Angeles, while Mills and Mrs. Day were released after posting $25,000 and $5,000 bonds, respectively.

"NOISY PARTY"

Investigators said Miss Nitto and Miss Livingston had made complete statements regarding the trips to San Diego, and that they had obtained corroborative evidence from hotel employes, who said a party October 30 was so noisy they investigated, and when they discovered what was happening they requested the group to leave.

Pantages' attorney rushed here from Los Angeles last night and made preparations to arrange the vaudeville impressario's bond, but Mr. and Mrs. Pantages did not return from Mexico. The attorneys said the theater magnate would come to San Diego and surrender today.

Conspiracy to violate and actual violation of the juvenile court laws were charged against the entire group.

GIRLS IN CUSTODY

Miss Nitto, Miss Livingston and Clarice Tauber, the latter listed as complaining witness against Mills, Jobelmann and the Day woman in the charge filed against them in Los Angeles, were held in technical custody there with several other girls of the purported market.

Jobelmann and Mrs. Day allegedly operated an agency through which wealthy men obtained companions for fees ranging from $175 to $1,000.

Pantages was convicted late in 1929 of attacking Miss Pringle, a student of a Los Angeles university, and was sentenced to from one to 50 years in San Quentin Penitentiary. He appealed on the ground that he was the innocent victim of a frame-up. The State Supreme Court ordered a new trial, but the prosecution petitioned for a rehearing. A decision is expected within a few weeks.

KIRKLAND LOSES HOPE

Kirkland was found guilty of the murder by a jury last night after four hours' deliberation. He will be sentenced Monday.

His heart heavy and his spirit broken, Kirkland confided to his keepers:

"I'm afraid I'm on my way to Michigan City never to return."

Waiting for the verdict as the jurors reported last night was the accused youth. His face was drawn. It appeared chalky in the yellow light from a clustered chandelier high above.

Nearby was his mother and stepfather. They had mortgaged their home to insure adequate defense for Virgil.

Across the chamber was the bent father of Arlene. Three of Arlene's four brothers were sitting by his side. The three sisters, two of whom had fainted during the trial, were absent.

An extra detail of deputies surrounded Kirkland. He was handcuffed to Sheriff Burney Maxwell, who remained alert during the final stages of the trial. The extra deputies were there, not because it was feared Kirkland would escape, but because rumors had been heard that fellow workers of Arlene's brothers would attack the defendant if he was acquitted.

MOTHER SOBS

When the jury returned its verdict there was no demonstration. Kirkland, who has rarely shown signs of emotion excepting while on the witness stand, remained unperturbed. His mother, sobbing, rushed to him, crying:

"My poor boy."

But Sheriff Maxwell drew Kirkland away, saying:

"You can see him later in his cell."

Leon Stanford, second of the five involved in the Draves death, was brought here from Crown Point late yesterday and lodged in a cell adjacent to that occupied by Kirkland. The other three, Paul Barton, David Thompson and Henry Shirk, are confined at Crown Point.

Former Counsellor Of Owen Young Dies

BALDWIN, N. Y., March 11.—(AP.)—The Rev. Dr. Alpheus Baker Hervey, life-long counsellor of Owen D. Young and former college president, died last night. He was 92.

Stricken with a lingering illness, Dr. Hervey was visited last week by Mr. Young, chairman of the General Electric Company, and they chatted briefly of the times when the former was president of St. Lawrence University and the latter was his chosen student.

PLAN 24-ROOM PARISH SCHOOL

Plans have been announced for a new $400,000 Sacred Heart parochial school to be erected at Emerson, Walnut and Alder streets. The building, adjoining the Sacred Heart Church, will be constructed of brick with stone trimmings in a modified collegiate Gothic style.

The school will contain 24 classrooms, an auditorium, gymnasium and cafeteria; art, music, dental, medical and other auxiliary equipment. It is expected construction will begin as soon as the parish disposes of the present school property in Center avenue.

Tobogganers at South Park do not care how long spring delays its coming. Crowds of from 250 to 300 nightly ply their sport in the light of the moon and floodlights at the top of the slide.

Thirty six-passenger toboggans and three 18-passenger bobsleds carry their loads until 11 p. m. under the direction of Lieut. W. J. Blackmore and Officers H. L. Aggers and J. L. Maitzko, County Park police.

Plans are being made to build a log cabin shelter at the toboggan slide next year, where chilly fingers and toes may be warmed at an open fireplace between rides.

Jews to Ask Change In Legion Meet Date

DETROIT, March 11.—(AP.)—Milford Stern, Detroit attorney, said that the American Jewish Committee and B'Nai Brith, Jewish organizations, will request that opening of the American Legion convention at Detroit next fall be changed from September 21, which would conflict with observance of Yom Kippur.

Stern said Mayor Frank Murphy, of Detroit, is joining with the Jewish organizations in appealing to the national executive committee of the Legion to change the convention dates.

Policeman Gives Up Star for Priesthood

CHICAGO, March 11.—(AP.)—Policeman Daniel R. Daley is going to put aside his star for the robes of the priesthood of the Roman Catholic Church.

This was disclosed yesterday when he said he was not interested in the outcome of an examination of policemen held for promotion to sergeants.

Many of his fellow officers plan to be present at his first solemn high mass, which will be celebrated Sunday, March 22, in the Visitation Church. Daley said for some years he had been getting leaves of absence and studying at St. Bonaventure's Seminary at Allegany, N. Y.

BERLIN URCHINS CHEER CHAPLIN

BERLIN, March 11.—(Universal.)—Charlie Chaplin went 'slumming' here, but he couldn't find any slums. The film comedian said:

"How much better people live here than in many sections of New York and London! They seem to be much better dressed."

Chaplin called on several families of unemployed, visited the Reichstag, and had tea in Hotel Eden. He refused to dance, although several pretty girls wanted him to. He had dinner tonight with the British ambassador, then went to the theater.

Invitations requesting a visit poured in from virtually all European countries during the day. Chaplin said he planned to return to England Friday, adding that he may go to Russia and Japan before returning to Hollywood.

While touring the poorer districts Chaplin endeared himself to scores of cheering urchins by his familiar film antics.

Woman Found Dead After Gas Blast

NEW YORK, March 11.—(AP.)—Mrs. O. W. Otter, 31, was found dead early today after a terrific explosion of gas in her apartment in West Eighty-eighth street. Mrs. Otter's husband is a traveling salesman. She conducted a Broadway dress shop under her maiden name, Grace Kelly.

BASSO SUICIDE AFTER ROW

NEW YORK, March 11.—(AP.)—William Gustafson, six-foot Metropolitan Opera basso, shot himself to death in his apartment last night.

The police said that following a quarrel with her husband, Mrs. Mary Wells Gustafson, threatened to take their two children to the home of her mother in Boston and he vowed he would kill himself. As she phoned for Pullman reservations, she heard a shot and found him lying on the floor with a wound in the temple. He was dead when a doctor arrived.

Mr. Gustafson, 42, created the role of Maceus in "The King's Henchmen," and had acted the Viking in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Sadko." Some of his other roles were the major-domo in the Metropolitan's first offering of "Boccaccio," Father in "Siegfried," King Henry in "Lohengrin," and the Landgrave in "Tannhauser." He sang in four languages.

He was born in Arlington, Mass., and made his first professional appearance in Boston in 1915. He was a second lieutenant of infantry during the World War.

Mrs. Gustafson is a pianist. The two children are Elizabeth, 7, and William, 6.

Girl Sculptor's Second Exhibit in Disaster

Miss Myrtle Altwater, business girl-sculptress, whose statue, "Eva Rose," is missing from the Associated Artists of Pittsburgh exhibit at Carnegie Museum, and whose tiny soap figure of two antelopes has been broken, today had a partial explanation of the "jinx" which has spoiled her exhibition.

Workmen at the Cathedral of Learning, across the street from the museum, set off a blasting charge and the force of it shattered the little soap figure, Miss Altwater was informed today in a letter from museum officials.

The figure was housed in a glass case, five inches square, and guards had been at loss to explain how the figure had been broken. Miss Altwater is still mystified as to what has happened to "Eva Rose," no trace of the statue having been found, or any explanation of its disappearance having been offered.

LANG DEFENDS PUBLIC WORKS CONTRACTS

Cites Reasons for Low Bid Rejections in Answer To Criticism by Evans

No apologies need be made, as there is nothing to conceal in the Department of Public Works' method of awarding contracts, Director Edward G. Lang said last night in defending his department against attacks made by former City Controller Henry Oliver Evans.

Full value for money expended has been the policy of his office, Lang said. He criticised severely the action of the late George Flinn of the Booth & Flinn Company, in denouncing the department "because she insisted on our awarding a contract to him at a price much higher than that of the low bidder."

WELCOMES INQUIRY

The low bidders, Lang asserted, were able to carry out the provisions of any contract as well as Booth & Flinn. He continued:

"We welcome most heartily any investigation of the Department of Public Works, as we have nothing to hide nor apologies to offer for the operation of the department since January, 1926.

"If an investigation is ordered, we shall be glad to cooperate in every way and are confident that we shall be able to show to the people of Pittsburgh that the charges are unjust and unwarranted — and with ulterior motives other than that of the best interests of the citizens of Pittsburgh."

DEFENDS ENGINEERS

Charges made against Charles M. Reppert and Tom M. Reed, engineers of the Public Works Department are "unjust, unfair and unwarranted," Long said. The engineers are he said most capable, conscientious, honest and loyal.

Admitting several score contracts for improvements had been given to other than the lowest bidders, Lang declared bonds of some of the low bidders were defective, some withdrew their bids because of errors in estimates and some bids were unbalanced and so far below the actual cost of the work that the contractor would necessarily have to use defective material to break even.

Others were refused, he said, because of lack of finances equipment and materials as well as for lack of necessary experience in the type of work needed by the city.

REACH HIGH TOTAL

Since Lang has been in office low bidders have received 1,267 contracts, his figures show, and 101 were given the second lowest bidders. In all 1,368 contracts have been let in his six years in office.

Total cost of the contracts let during his incumbency has been $20,374,024.72, while the low bids submitted totaled $20,200,184.83. This is a difference of $83,839.89.

Contracts awarded this year amount to $171,035.15. The largest contracts of Lang's term, awarded in 1929, totaled $5,677,665.13.

EVANS CHARGES TRICK

Former Controller Evans declared that a large increase in the number of items in contracts for city work make it possible for a wise bidder to bid low on the materials not required in large quantities and high on a few things where the requirements would be greater.

He claims that the man who is low on the contract price may get more out of the job in the end than the original high bidder.

50 YEARS IN PRACTICE

DR. EDWARD C. LEWIS — EDWARD C. LEWIS II

Dr. Lewis at Verona M. E. Church last night as 300 fellow townsmen honored him upon his completion of 50 years of medical practice, of which he spent 37 in Verona. Edward's his grandson, came all the way from Los Angeles and was promised snow.

VERONA HONORS VETERAN MEDIC

More than 300 of his fellow townsmen and women did honor to Dr. Edward C. Lewis, of Verona, at the dinner given last night in the Methodist Church to celebrate his half-century as a practitioner. The guests included Dr. Lewis' daughter-in-law, Mrs. Gordon Lewis, of Los Angeles, and her son, Edward C. Lewis, II. Neal Yeager, the first baby "brought" to the town by Dr. Lewis, also was present.

The toastmaster, the Rev. R. M. Stumpf, as well as the other members of the committee on arrangements, appeared in the uniform of internes, and the women of the church, who served the dinner, were dressed as Red Cross workers.

The Rev. John O. Martin offered a prayer, and there were brief talks by Dr. J. M. Hamilton, of Oakmont, whose half-century of practice had been celebrated four years ago; Dr. J. W. Dixon, of Pittsburgh; W. J. Molleston, chairman of the committee, and Hyatt M. Cribbs, who presented the honor guest with a gold medal on behalf of the assemblage.

LINCOLN BOARD PLANS BENEFIT

At a meeting last night of the Lincoln District Board of Trade, the committee which will handle the benefit performance for the Lincoln avenue district unemployed made its report.

A. C. MacCumbee has been appointed general chairman by Brook N. Edmonston, board of trade president. B. J. Ehrlich, in charge of the entertainment committee, announced that the program has been completed for the show.

The benefit will be held in Epiphany Lutheran Church, April 10, and will consist of three hours' entertainment including four skits by the Vagabond Players of Carlisle, a minstrel by the KP Minstrel Company, songs by Baker's Carolina Songbirds and other specialties.

Council Bible Quoting Near Blasphemy, Pastor Says

Criticism of the use of Bible quotations by city councilmen in defending their stand on the proposed probe of the Department of Supplies was contained in an open letter sent Council by the Rev. Dr. W. Wofford T. Duncan, pastor of Emory Methodist Episcopal Church. Declaring the councilmen's use of Scripture approached sacrilege and blasphemy, the letter said:

"It is perhaps better for a clergyman to criticize your injection of religion into the discussion of Mayor Kline's administration than for a layman to do it. Many laymen who revolt against your misapplication of Scripture and your unseemly appeal to prayer may hesitate to condemn it lest they appear to oppose professions of piety. I feel that I am voicing the sentiments of all classes of religionists in the city when I say that I regard the quotation of Scripture and the use of pious exclamations as most unseemly and irrelevant, approaching the verge of sacrilege and blasphemy. You have in my judgment done the cause of religion great damage by encouraging many to think that religion can be used for purposes of evasion. I do not charge you with so using it. I assume that you were not practicing hypocrisy; but many people do, and these will find it easier to cover up craven deceit with pious platitudes.

"The Christian religion is nothing if it is not highly ethical. Its Founder was utterly ruthless in His search to the core of things. He said 'there is nothing covered that shall not be revealed, niether hid that shall not be known.' It is this type of genuine religion that is needed today. The citizens are asking the Council to practice just this type. We want all the facts concerning the city administration and we want them discovered and described by fair-minded investigators who have no connection with the administration itself. This is the true spirit of the Christian religion. It is most unfortunate that you seem to quote that religion in opposition to this course."

letting contracts for food and supplies for the various city departments.

Brandon, relating how numerous friends in various merchandising interests had asked him to intercede for them because they felt their product was "as good, if not better" than others being sold to the city, was told by Succop that he was "under orders" in the placement of contracts, Brandon said.

"Succop and I had lunch together one day while I was still on the bench in Morals Court. I told him that friends of mine had asked me to intercede for them. Succop told me, 'Why, I can't even favor my own friends.'

"'Why don't you get the Mayor's office o. k.—you know everything I do has to come from there?'"

URGES DEEPER PROBE

The former Morals Court magistrate lauded the various civic organizations for their stand in demanding a public investigation, but declared the fight had not gone far enough. Asserting the citizens had but "scratched the surface," he demanded:

"Why don't they go through with it and investigate the Department of Public Safety?

"The growing power of ward chairmen, their control and domination of our police department is responsible for public graft and political racketeering. We have over 1,000 police officers in this city, but there is not one among them that is allowed to do his duty as a policeman.

"The policeman cannot raid, he can seldom make an arrest unless he has orders from his superior officer, and after the raid, the officer invariably falls down in the prosecution of the case.

BLAMES MAYOR

"I speak now from experience—four years as magistrate of the Morals Court—and in very few cases did the evidence actually stand up under prosecution. I have questioned these officers about their 'about face' tactics after an arrest.

"Repeatedly, I got the same answer—"Well, you know—I've got a wife and family?"

The former magistrate, fired by Kline last year, lays full responsibility for the laxity of police and local vice conditions at the Mayor's door. A policeman cannot gain promotion, he declared, for meritorious service. He cited two specific instances of policemen who performed unusual and outstanding duties, yet were demoted instead of promoted and eventually let out.

He declared:

"If Mayor Kline is not receiving political patronage from the underworld, why hasn't he done something in the five years he has been in office to combat the ever-growing racket and vice conditions?

"Of course, he may not know how to combat these things, but to me it is obvious. I know what I should do if I were mayor."

CHARGES PROTECTION

In this possibility, Brandon declared he would ask every police head for his resignation. They would be undated, he said, and he would order them to "go out and clean up." If they had not complied within a reasonable length of time, their resignations would be accepted.

Brandon declared speakeasies and "joints" operating in the city were being run with police protection. They could not be operated otherwise, he said.

He referred to a recent magazine article which estimated the number of speakeasies at 2,500 and disorderly houses at 250. Brandon declared:

"That article underestimated the number. Not one of these places could operate without the sanction of the higher-ups.

"Charles Howard Kline, your mayor, himself is responsible."

SCORES CLARK

The former magistrate also declared Safety Director Clark was cognizant of conditions in the city. Of Clark, Brandon declared:

"He knows where these places—these speakeasies and disorderly houses—are. He has or can get a list of them. Let him bring out such a list and call in his police officials and tell them to clean up."

Brandon spoke to more than 100 fathers and mothers of pupils in the Harwood School. The meeting was presided over by Mrs. Thomas Monk, a member of the Allegheny County League of Voters. Preceding the address an entertainment by pupils was given and folowing Brandon's address lunch was served.

Peru Revolts End Under Ocampo Rule

LIMA, Peru, March 11.—(INS.)—Peru's political somersaults were believed definitely ended today with installation of Dr. Samanez Ocampo as provisional president, and dissolusion of the rebel "Southern Junta." Dr. Ocampo, in ill health and drafted to the executive seat against his will, immediately plunged into the task of organizing his provisional government. He arrived here from Arequipa by airplane last night.

Philip Snowden's Condition Improves

LONDON, March 11.—(AP.)—Condition of Philip Snowden, Britain's chancellor of the exchequer, today showed a slight improvement, it was stated at his Frensham residence. He is suffering from cystitis.

CITY LINOLEUM DEAL SCORED

the vault floor is a worn, soiled brown, probably laid when the building was erected.

The terms of the contract authorizing the floor coverings for the office and vault follow:

"The general contractor shall include the sum of $475 in his proposal to cover the cost of new linoleum floors in the city clerk's office and the vault, as specified above, to be selected by the city architect.

"The linoleum floors will be furnished by another contractor, and will be delivered to the building and installed in place, but to be paid for by the general contractor.

"It is especially provided in these specifications that maximum amount of money stipulated above for the linoleum floors, that if, after the selection of the linoleum floors, the cost of same is less than the amount provided, a credit will be allowed the city for the difference between the amount spent and the amount provided.

"The above sum includes all material and labor for the two new linoleum floors as called for in the specifications."

Included in Parker's bill in which the $360 linoleum item appeared were six other items of equipment, making a total of $965.

The articles, which included a steel cabinet, two window shades, window and door draperies, two sets of glass window ventilators, nine radiators and a door for a steel counter, were purchased by Parker without bidding.

BIDS 'IMPRACTICABLE'

No bid number appeared on the order sent to the controller, and the omission was excused in a note typed on the order and signed by City Clerk Clark:

"Special equipment—office of the city clerk. Securing of competitive bids impracticable."

Informed of this, Controller J. P. Kerr declared in some instances bidding for materials was unnecessary.

City Clerk Clark, asked about his note on the omission of bidding, said he was probably out of town when the work was being done, and then declared he knew nothing about it.

COVERS UNEXPLAINED

The contract called for four radiator covers for offices of councilmen. Parker billed the city and was paid for nine. The contract did not mention the five extra covers.

Another mystery was the items of "furniture, rugs, etc." A sum of $400 was included in the contract, but the provisions did not specify what "furniture, rugs, etc." meant. The steel cabinet, mentioned in Parker's bill, might be office furniture, and the "etc." might be construed to point to door and window draperies or window shades. The latter articles both appear on Parker's bill.

Over objections by Councilmen Garland and Anderson, Council yesterday approved payment of $4,200 to Parker for remodeling of Central station. Both councilmen averred the bill should be held for investigation since the contract was awarded without advertising for bids.

Crosson Returns From Serum Flight

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, March 11.—(AP.)—Pilot Joe Crosson returned here yesterday from Point Barrow, far to the north, where he flew a quantity of antitoxin for diphtheria patients.

Five persons were suffering virulent attacks of diphtheria and there were several less serious cases. Planes of a moving picture expedition, en route to Barrow, will leave here in a few days carrying another supply of serum.

Glider Pilot Flies Low Over New York

NEW YORK, March 11.—(AP.)—Wolf Hirth, German glider pilot, soared low over upper Riverside drive and the Hudson river for about 50 minutes and landed safely.

The only tense moment came when he nearly collided in landing with a baby carriage. In his flight Hirth generally kept at a 500-foot level.

Hunt Hit-Run Driver In Injury to Miner

County detectives today were searching for the hit-and-run motorist who struck Joseph Janecki, 30, a homeless and jobless coal miner, on the Library road, near Finleyville, yesterday.

Two other miners brought Janecki to the Helping Hand lodging house, where he had been staying. Later he was taken to South Side Hospital where it was said he suffered a fractured right leg and a head injury.

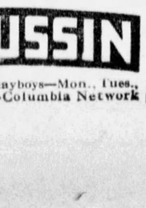
COUGHING IS TABOO ON THE AIR!



Rolf Alexis Sanderson

RADIO people can't afford to cough. "I should feel disgraced if I coughed while on the air," Rolf Sanderson, WGBS program director and singer says. And Barbara Maurel, contralto with the Columbia Broadcasting System, declares, "Many of us have learned to rely on the quick relief Pertussin gives."

Barbara Maurel

Broadcasting studios use Pertussin because it relieves coughs quickly and clears the air passages. Doctors have prescribed it for years—for both young and old.

"We always keep this quick remedy right beside the microphone" says George Beuchler, Station WABC Columbia Broadcasting System. Why don't you try the remedy radio people rely on? This is coughing weather. Watch out! Get Pertussin. Every druggist has it.

Home building planned in the Sewickley Heights district for this year will be valued at approximately $1,500,000, borough officials estimate. A new home being planned for Eugene Murray, vice president of the Fidelity Trust Company and president of the First National Bank of Sewickley, will cost about $75,000. The proposed home of W. C. Meanor to be built along West and Creek drives will be valued close to $100,000. Other homes to cost between $100,000 and $200,000 are for J. R. Semple and Mrs. Stuart Robinson. Another contract recently announced provides construction of a new home for Sidney Liggett, vice president of the Union Trust Company of Pittsburgh. Revival in home construction in the Sewickley Heights section is attributed to the present favorable building material prices.

John E. Reilly has deeded to the Provident Mutual Life Insurance Company an improved property on lot 42x68 feet in Center avenue, Seventh Ward, for the named consideration of $47,911.

A home in Westfield avenue, West View, has been sold by James Martin to Frank Lowry for $6,700. The lot measures 30x120 feet.

A new home in Virginia Manor, Mt. Lebanon, is being planned by George L. Haller, 166 North Dithridge street. Harry Viehman, architect, announces that bids for the residence will be out within the next few days.

An irregular lot in Indiana Township has been deeded by the Dollar Savings and Trust Company to Charles May. The consideration was set at $15,100.

An improved property in Shade street, Bellevue, has been purchased by Edward R. Donovan from Harry S. Spang. The lot is 59x120 feet.

Applications for building permits follow:

Nineteenth Ward—M. L. Carlin, concrete block garage, 1800 Fallowfield street, $500. J. R. Williams, repairs, 241 Starkamp street, $400.

Twentieth Ward — John B. Merck, concrete block garage, 1111 Crucible street, $850.

Twenty-first Ward — United Laundries, repair building, 1200 Sheffield street, $2,000.

Twenty-second Ward—W. C. Hoffman, brick garage, 902 Sherman avenue, $400.

Twenty-fourth Ward — John Wall, concrete block garage, 1334 Goettman street, $500.

Twenty-sixth Ward — M. Curran, brick dwelling and garage, 2922 Perrysville avenue, $6,500.

Tweny-seventh Ward—W. Fitzurka, brick dwelling and garage, $400 Reuben street, $6,000.

Sale! The Fashionable Dull Silk Hosiery

Chiffon Weight Service Weight

$1.15 Pair

A hosiery event of greatest interest to every fashion-wise woman . . . dull silk stockings—the most important hosiery fashion of the season—offered at the low price of $1.15 pair! Fine silk is twisted before the stockings are knit—to retain its permanent dullness—to insure longer wear.

Picot top all-silk chiffon of 45-gauge 4-thread silk . . . service weight of 42-gauge 10-thread silk, with lisle tops and soles. Both styles have French narrow heels and come in all the new Horne-sponsored shades for spring and summer. Sizes 8½ to 10½.

Supply your own needs for spring—select extra pairs for gifts.

TOMORROW . . . LAST FASHION PRESENTATION OF

TRUHU Silks

10:30 A. M. 2:30 P. M.

A fashion presentation which rivals spring itself . . . fresh, colorful, lovely new frocks of pure-dye washable Truhu—the silks that have so long been favorites with Horne customers! More than 25 costumes for street, sports, afternoon, and evening are being shown by living models.

Miss Esther Raup, a Truhu representative, is here to present these new fashions—to show the new Truhu shades and gay spring prints. She will be glad to assist women in the selection of correct materials, and help them in planning spring wardrobes.

There is a Truhu silk for every sort of spring and summer frock, at the new low prices:

Truhu Crepe de Chine, $1.65 yard
Truhu Flat Crepe, $2.50 yard
Truhu Radium Silk, $1.95 yard
Printed Truhu Crepe, $2.25 yard
Trushan Sports Silk, $1.65 yard
Truhu French Crepe, $2.25 yard

Babies' Easter Coats

Fashions in babies' spring coats are so very charming that modern infants cannot help being a bit conceited from the time they are outfitted for their first Easter! The loveliest coats, of course, are in pastels, with clever new collars, new closings, new trimmings.

Toddlers' Coat and Hat Sets—of pastel Kenwood cloth—a flecked woolen fabric that is washable. Silk or angora trims. Sizes 1 and 2 years. With hats to match. Special, $12.75.

Pastel Flannel Coats—with scalloped yokes and bits of smocking, $10. Berets to match, $1.75.

Babies' Crepe de Chine Coats—beautifully smocked and embroidered, $8.75. Bonnets to match, for little babies, $1.50 to $1.95. Silk Pique Hats for toddlers, $2.95.

. . . Horne's, Infants' Shop, Third Floor . . .

Color Contrast in Coats

Color contrast is one of the outstanding features of new spring coats.

However, the effect must be achieved with good taste as guidance, and that is how it is done here, in black coats with white or white-and-black fur, red or green with black, brown with white, dark blue with beige, and black coats with white showing through embroidered eyelets. $39.50 to $195.

. . . Horne's, Women's and Misses' Coats, Second Floor . . .

Suits With Short Blouses

Horne suits with short jackets have their blouses just long enough to come well over the waistline, instead of extending ungracefully over the hips.

That is just one of the many points upon which we are insistent in having the blouses of our suits perfectly harmonized to the jackets, so the well costumed look will be kept when the jacket is removed. $39.50 to $150.

. . . Horne's, Women's and Misses' Suits, Second Floor . . .

Crisp White on Two-Tone Prints

A clear two-tone print trimmed with eyelet-embroidered lawn edged with lace, is something different in the vogue of lingerie-trimmed frocks.

The woman's model pictured comes in navy with white design, black with white, and mint-green or red with white. Its youthful bolero and shorter sleeves are notable, and its fine, supple texture is a delight. $59.50.

. . . Horne's, Women's Finer Dresses, Second Floor . . .

Frocks With Tie-on Jackets

The very newest sheer frock for dining-dancing-theater wear is the one pictured.

A misses' model of chiffon, in black, powder blue, or beige, with a charmingly new tie-in-front jacket. Another new feature is its ecru lace top over flesh satin which extends below the waistline instead of ending in a yoke.

A surprise at $25.

What the NEW HUMIDOR PACK

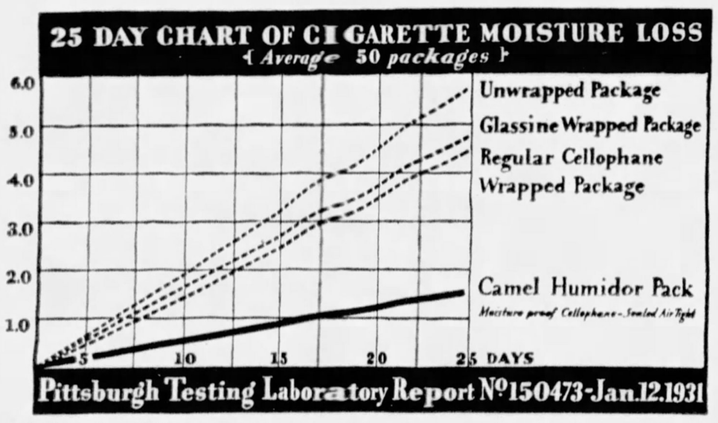
means to Camel Smokers *

COMPARE a package of Camels with any other cigarette and note the difference in the technique of packing.

Note that Camels are completely enclosed in an outer transparent cover of moisture-proof cellophane and sealed air-tight at every point.

We call this outer shell the Humidor Pack. It differs from the ordinary cellophane pack and while it is egg-shell thin, it means a lot in terms of cigarette enjoyment.

It means, for instance, that evaporation is checkmated and that Salt Lake City can now have as good Camels as Winston-Salem.



The Pittsburgh Testing Laboratory chart above graphically shows you that only the Camel Humidor Pack delivers cigarettes to you in prime condition

While Camels are made of a blend of the choicest Turkish and mellowest domestic tobaccos, it is highly important, if you are to get full benefit of this quality, that these cigarettes come to you with their natural moisture content still intact.

The Humidor Pack insures that. It prevents the fine tobaccos of Camels from drying out and losing any of their delightful flavor.

Aside from cheap tobacco, two factors in a cigarette can mar the smoker's pleasure:

Fine particles of peppery dust if left in the tobacco by inefficient cleaning methods sting and irritate delicate throat membrane.

Dry tobacco, robbed of its natural moisture by scorching or by evaporation gives off a hot smoke that burns the throat with every inhalation.

We take every precaution against these factors here at Winston-Salem.

A special vacuum cleaning apparatus removes dust and now the new Humidor Pack prevents dryness.

Check the difference yourself

It is a very simple matter to check the difference between Humidor Packed Camels and other ordinary dry cigarettes.

First of all you can feel the difference as you roll the cigarettes between your fingers. Camels are full-bodied and pliable. A dry cigarette crumbles under pressure and sheds tobacco.

If you will hold a cigarette to each ear and roll them with your fingers you can actually hear the difference.

The real test of course is to smoke them. And here's where the new Humidor Pack proves a real blessing to the smoker.

As you inhale the cool, fragrant smoke from a Camel you get all the mildness and magic of the fine tobaccos of which it is blended.

But when you draw in the hot smoke from a dried cigarette see how flat and brackish it is by comparison and how harsh it is to your throat.

If you are a regular Camel smoker you have already noticed what proper condition of the cigarette means.

But if you haven't tried Camels in the new Humidor Pack you have a new adventure with Lady Nicotine in store.

Switch your affections for just one day, then go back to your old love tomorrow if you can.

SCORES SUBMIT THEIR RECIPES

The macaroni-spaghetti recipe contest which the Sun-Telegraph is conducting for housewives continues to interest scores of women, who are daily submitting their entries. There is still time to send in your favorite recipe, which might win one of the many prizes.

The rules are simple and are printed here. All you must do is follow instructions. No doubt you have a favorite style of serving macaroni or spaghetti to members of your family and if it pleases them it possibly is good enough to merit an award in the contest conducted by the Sun-Telegraph.

Parents to Meet In Bellevue School

Parents of children in Grant School, South Bryant avenue, Bellevue, will meet Wednesday afternoon, March 25, to organize a Parent-Teachers Association. Mrs. George Ludland, of Bellevue, is in charge of committees taking an active part in the organization movement.

Contest Rules

1—Each contestant may submit as many recipes as she wishes, calling for macaroni or spaghetti.
2—A part of the wrapper of a package of any brand must be enclosed with your recipe.
3—Write on one side of the paper only. Be sure your name and address are on each sheet of paper you submit. This is important.
4—Mail recipes to Macaroni Contest Editor, care of the Sun-Telegraph.
5—The contest closes at noon on March 21.
6—The names of the winners will be announced soon after that date. The prize-winning recipes also will be published.

THE PRIZES

(Macaroni Contest)

First prize—Twenty dollars in cash and one dozen assorted packages of macaroni products.

Second prize—Ten dollars in cash and six assorted packages of macaroni products.

Third prize—Five dollars in cash and six assorted packages of macaroni produtes.

Fourth prize—Three dollars in cash and three packages of macaroni products.

Twelve prizes of $1 each in cash and two packages each of macaroni products.

Twelve prizes of one dozen assorted packages each of macaroni products.

Spaghetti Contest

First prize—Twenty dollars in cash and one dozen assorted packages of spaghetti products.

Second prize—Ten dollars in cash and six assorted packages of spaghetti products.

Third prize—Five dollars in cash and six assorted packages of spaghetti products.

Fourth prize—Three dollars in cash and three packages of spaghetti products.

Twelve prizes of $1 each in cash and two packages each of spaghetti products.

Twelve prizes of one dozen assorted packages each of spaghetti products.

In addition to the above prizes, each contestant submitting one or more recipes calling for macaroni or spagetti will receive a macaroni timer free.

NEW IDEA SAVES SILK HOSE

Expensive at best, silk hose and undergarments are made doubly so by improper washing. A fashion expert has found a new, simple way to correct this.

She adds a tablespoonful of Energine to every quart of lukewarm, soapy water. Then she washes and rinses the articles as usual. The addition of Energine removes all the body excretions that soften and rot silk.

The results are amazing. Not only does this method give new cleanliness and freshness with original color revived but actually gives longer life to hose and undergarments. Try this new method. It's easier and quicker than just soap and water alone, means less rubbing and insures extra wear that will surprise you.

Energine is unexcelled, also, for quickly removing all dirt and grease spots from dresses, hats, gloves, shoes, etc. Large can 35 cents at any drug store.

SHERIFF LINDSAY, WEIS & HUTCHINSON
1406 Law & Finance Building

To Charles F. Wetmore, E. N. Havens, John Seville, Catherine Johnston, James Johnston and Sarah Ann Johnston, their devisees, assigns, heirs and next of kin:
Take notice That on February 24, 1931, Samuel S. Brown presented his petition to the Court of Common Pleas of Allegheny County, Pennsylvania at No. 2475 April Term, 1931, setting forth inter alia, that he is the owner in fee simple of

ALL that certain lot or piece of ground situate in the West Side of Grantham street in the Twenty-third Ward of the City of Pittsburgh, County of Allegheny and State of Pennsylvania, described as follows:

BEGINNING on Grantham street, at a distance of 40 feet northwardly from Anderson alley, thence northwardly along Grantham street, 20 feet, thence westwardly by the line parallel with the aforesaid alley, 60 feet and 10 inches, thence southwardly towards the aforesaid alley by a line parallel with Grantham street, to a point distant 40 feet from said alley, thence by a line parallel with said alley 60 feet and 10 inches to Grantham street, at the place of beginning.

That Petitioner acquired title thereto, from the estate of Thomas E. Fisher, deceased who and his ancestors held title to said lot since 1861.

That the above named defendants have an apparent interest or title in the real estate above described, and for the purpose of quieting title to the property above described, the Court granted a rule upon Charles F. Wetmore, E. N. Havens, John Seville, Catherine Johnston, James Johnston and Sarah Ann Johnston and their devisees, assigns, heirs and next of kin to bring an action of ejectment for said land within six months from the date of service by publication, or to show cause why the same cannot be brought, and in default thereof they shall be forever barred, returnable the first Monday of July, 1931.

Alma Rubens Resorts To Acting in Plan to Escape From Asylum

By ALMA RUBENS

CHAPTER XXXV

I was a moving picture actress—after all.

Dope fiend, or no dope fiend, sane or crazy, I was an actress.

Very well then—I would act.

So I began to smile—I pretended to be careless and care free.

I talked pleasantly to the attendants, and it was not long till they gathered around me at recreation hour and I told them long tales about Hollywood, and the studios, and New York and the wild times at the night clubs. I described my beautiful home, with its swimming pool and gardens, and gorgeously furnished rooms. I told them about my clothes, my house dresses, my robes from India and China. My furs from Russia, my sport dresses from England, my evening dresses from Paris.

Miss Rubens

I told them about my pearls, my diamonds and my rubies, and I told them—this they loved best of all—about my admirers.

They would look at each other and laugh, but I saw envy in their cruel eyes, after all, helpless prisoner as I was, watched, ruled, ordered around, every minute of my life—I was still luckier than they—for once at least I had lived.

Feared Envy

I told them about my handsome husband and the beautiful flowers he used to bring me, and the letters he wrote to me—but I had to be careful about that. I made them a little too envious, and one of them began to try to goad me into some temper or fit of violence, so that she could lock me up in my cell again.

But I was too clever for her. I laughed and changed the subject.

And all the time I was planning—planning—planning.

One day my plans came to a head.

Out in the yard there was a mulberry tree, under this mulberry tree we of the milder group of what they called in savage irony, "patients," sat every day in recreation hour.

Most of this little group that daily gathered under the mulberry tree were sane on all but one subject. Many of them were persons of the highest education and refinement, who would have appreciated good food and good clothes and a little diversion.

We had no entertainment, nothing natural or sane in our lives at all.

One day as we sat under the mulberry tree, a little group of children came over to see us. They were the children of the doctors, who lived in the little green and white bungalows near the main building. The children wanted to hear all about Hollywood. I told them pleasantly enough, but all at once one of the boys pulled from his pockets a pair of white rats.

Prank Aided Plan

I let out a shriek of terror, and ran as though all the fiends of the inferno were after me. On and on, I sped, screaming, and on the verge of fainting. I could hear the children behind me shouting in glee.

My guards were roaring with laughter. I was giving them all a pleasant diversion.

Fully two-hundred yards away, I looked back—not a soul had taken a step toward catching me.

Now was my time.

Like a deer I sped on across the lawn and down a steep embankment. I leaped across a little ravine, climbed a wire fence, and dashed into an orange grove, adjoining the Patton grounds.

I threw myself on the earth and rested an instant—I heard them shouting together down there, and I knew they were after me.

Down the opposite side of the little ridge I went, my feet became entangled in the long, tough fox grass and I fell. I struggled to my feet and went on. I fell again, and rolled up again. My face and hands were torn and bleeding, my clothes were almost gone. I could see through a gap in the trees below me an open road with automobiles running up and down. If I could only make that road perhaps I could catch on behind a fleeting car and make my getaway.

Another ravine, another briar patch, my ankle twisted and I fell again, but I scrambled to my feet and kept on.

Then I caught my toe, under a fallen branch, treacherously buried in the tangled grass, and fell heavily.

I struck the top of my head against the tree trunk and I was half stunned. I was too weak to regain my feet, but I began to creep on my hands and knees.

Now the pack was upon me. The attendants bore down upon me like wolves. They slapped my bloody face, and twisted my arms behind me.

Escape Foiled

Ignominously I was led back and taken to the superintendent's office.

He ordered me sent to Ward 5, the next to the worst ward in the place, as punishment.

"But San Quentin," I gasped, "You'll have to obey the law!"

The superintendent smiled.

"Your attempt doesn't count," he said. "We'll keep you around with us for a while. We all like you so much you know."

And he smiled again.

I was led away to Ward 5, where I was placed in a room with a young woman of the semi-violent type, the guards told me about her, and what she was liable to do almost any time.

They laughed heartily when they told it.

I thought I had seen something of misery in Patton.

My education had only just begun. The patients in number five were all violent, many of them were criminals. We had religious maniacs, degenates of every description, and dozens of poor people with no minds what-so-ever.

Life there was one long siege of terror.

If my nerves were not already shattered by dope—what chance do I [illegible] of a place like that—"cured?"

Alma Rubens in tomorrow's installment describes her awful punishment after failure to escape from asylum.

Arizona Mine Expert To Be Honored Here

Robert E. Tally, of Jerome, Ariz., national president of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers, will be honored at a dinner in the Pittsburgh Athletic Association, Thursday evening, by members of the Pittsburgh section of the organization. Tally will be accompanied to Pittsburgh by Dr. H. Foster Bain, of New York, secretary. During the afternoon the guests will visit the research laboratory of the Aluminum Company of America, at New Kensington.

What you taste in Chesterfield cigarettes is milder and better tobaccos—nothing else—blended and "cross-blended" to produce a satisfying fragrance, a flavor which is Chesterfield's alone!

FOR NINETEEN years, our Research Department has kept intimate touch with every new development of Science that could be applied to the manufacture of cigarettes. During this period there has been no development of tested value or importance to the smoker which we have not incorporated into the making of Chesterfield cigarettes.

ANN HARDING ON RADIO TONIGHT

The Loudspeaker

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, March 11.—A sharp difference of opinion has arisen over the designation of the huge entertainment center to be erected in mid-Manhattan by the Rockefeller interests.

At present it is called by three different names—Radio City, Rockefeller City and Metropolitan Square. If the man in the street has anything to say, it will be known as Radio City. In fact, it is already known as such. This name at least has the advantage of brevity. It has punch. It sticks in the mind. And it suggests definitely what is to be the dominating enterprise of the building group.

Summoned the other night to view models of the plan, this department asked an elevator starter for directions to the temporary offices of Radio City. He caught us up sharply:

"You mean Rockefeller City."

As we entered the offices an attendant, pointing to a group of people surrounding a revolving turnstile, said:

"You will find a model of Metropolitan Square over there."

And find it we did. It was fascinating to look upon, a revolving turnstile moving ever so regularly, so tranquilly, disclosing now a severe, cloud-piercing building, now a church, dwarfed but dignified, now another skyscraper, now a squat, windowless structure, indicating that even Rockefeller gold has not been able to persuade its owner to listen to reason. Rows indicating streets could be discerned between the buildings, and in the center of the area facing Fifth avenue, was an oval structure, like a perfume box, rising 14 stories in height and designed to house a bank.

Gazing at the revolving table, and its file of blocks we could not banish the thought that it was a pipe dream, a beautiful, enchanting pipe dream. It was so immense in its scale, so strikingly radical in its architectural conception. So much attention seemed to be given to light and air. The designers were not permitting the skyscrapers to jut against lesser and humbler buildings. The chief tower, in which broadcasting is to be centered, stood alone and serene in the middle.

But it is not a pipe dream. We heard John R. Todd, chief engineer, say that work upon the area will actually begin in June and that the entire project be completed by the end of 1932 in time for—ahead of time, it would seem—the network broadcasting of television. We heard him also hold out hope that the mahatmas of the Metropolitan Opera Company would decide to come into the center—that "it will be to the best interests of everybody if they do come in."

And while they munched on caviar and lobster Newburgh, newspaper and magazine writers were curious about the architectural style. No definite style seemed to be visible, though here and there there was a hint of the Egyptian in deference to the wishes, it is said, of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., recently returned from a visit to Egypt. Architects said that while classic lines had been followed to some extent, Radio City was in the "New York style."

Most of those who did the talking were chary of figures, though it was disclosed that in the nine separate buildings there will be 28,000 windows. M. H. Aylesworth, generalissimo of NBC, added to the statistics by saying that there will be 27 broadcasting studios in the building given over to his company. Hiram Brown, of R-K-O, brought no figures to his talk, but he did reveal that Roxy would begin his work as manager of Radio City on April 1. Maybe Roxy would prefer April 2.

Amos 'n' Andy, it may surprise you to know, receive at the N. B. C., despite their nation-wide popularity, but 5,000 letters a month. Seth Parker can point to 8,000 letters. Jolly Bill and Jane get 5,000. Lowell Thomas can show 10,000 letters, while George Frame Brown, in the character of Matt Thompkins, is able to count 7,000. All of these persons are among the most favored of radio's entertainers. Millions hear them daily, but only a few paltry thousand rush to pen and ink.

* * *

Radio's clergy fares even worse. The three leading dominies of the microphone—Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, Dr. Daniel A. Poling and Dr Harry Emerson Fosdick—receive altogether only 3,000 letters a month. Evidently spiritual youth and beauty are not as important to the listeners.

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor.

About the time Ann Harding faces a microphone in Hollywood tonight to tell of her latest picture success, "East Lynne," her former associates in the George Sharp Players will utilize whatever moments they have offstage at the Pitt to hear her voice on a set specially installed for the occasion. The set reposes in the same room used by Ann when she was leading lady of the company along with her husband, Harry Bannister, then leading man. This is not Ann Harding's first performance on the air. We can recall two previous local appearances, notably the radio production of "The Ghost Train" from the Pitt stage several years ago. This was one of the first attempts at creating "sound effects" over the air. Be in your seats at 8:30 when the curtain rises on WJAS. Louella O. Parsons, Hearst movie editor, is to quiz Ann.

We tuned the RKO hour one night and heard a girl singing "Mignon" more marvelously than we had heard it sung before. It was beautiful Jeannette MacDonald whose high range finds adequate expression tonight in the "Italian Street Song" and "Indian Love Call" (KDKA at 9:30).

A program with a punch—James J. Corbett relates his ring experiences in a new electrical transcription series (WJAS, 6:30).

QUESTION A DAY:

Is Vincent Lopez a Spaniard and is he still married to Rosette, the dancer?—Blanche Hart, North Side.

Answer—Lopez born in Brooklyn, N. Y. Told us when in Pittsburgh not long ago, that he has never married.

Harry Richman was better from his own club last night than he has been as guest artist of other programs.

Croon Prince Vallee is keeping the postman busy in Miami. The girl who sang on his program there is said to average a Vallee letter every three days.

Reporters and editors about the office have conferred the "Order of the Star" on Jimmy Long, sports writer, for his correct diagnosis of the Amos 'n' Andy muddle. Jimmy was the first person to publicly claim that Madame Queen was married before she met Andy.

The Fast Freight (WJAS at 9) is to change tracks and become an Express via KDKA starting Monday, March 30, at 8:30. Ohman and Arden, the piano boys, are to be engineers. Roy Smeck, guitarist, becomes conductor.

Louise Reed, formerly of "The Student Prince," is to be hostess to radio stars at Ann West's luncheon room on Oliver avenue tonight at 7:30. John K. Chapel, Russian count and KQV announcer, is toastmaster.

* * *

Nell Vinick, beautician on WJAS every Wednesday a. m. says:

"The glass that cheers should be your mirror."

From a yacht in the Thames River KDKA fans are to hear a first-hand report of the Oxford-Cambridge boat races at 9:15 a. m. Saturday, March 21.

Guesses on Amos 'n' Andy's future occupation are now in order. A bid for their services as minstrels heads the list. They are now broadcasting from the studios of WJZ in New York—there to gather new material for their sketches and discuss business "propolitions."

Kowalski's "Salut a Pesth"—the piece that has ruined many piano hands by its fast and furious play—is a feature of WCAE at 8:30. Milton Rettenberg and Jack Shilkret are to play it with their wrists taped.

* * *

Ted Lewis comes to WCAE fans with his "Musical Clowns" on Saturday, March 21, at 7:30.

Burning Stomach Torture 3 Years

Misery Ends Quick with New Prescription, ACIDINE

"For the last three years I have been bothered by food souring, causing a burning sensation, that at times I felt like jumping into the river," says Mr. E. J. Moore, Cincinnati, Ohio. "I tried innumerable medicines, consulted a stomach specialist, but no relief. Finally I heard about ACIDINE and got some. No more burning or sour belching and vomiting, no headaches. ACIDINE is wonderful."

Similar reports from all over rave about this amazing new prescription that succeeds where others fail. The reason is that ACIDINE is entirely different. Contains the marvelous digestant called Japtase. In laboratory experiments Japtase has been tested on certain starchy foods which cause so much stomach distress. It digested 3000 times its weight of such foods in only 30 minutes!

Five other ingredients in ACIDINE instantly neutralize burning acid, soothe irritated stomach lining, stop gas and headache from acidity. No other remedy contains this scientific combination to end acid stomach.

Don't risk serious and more painful troubles. Get ACIDINE from your druggist today. Costs only a few cents. Watch how quick acid indigestion, burning stomach, belching, pain, heartburn, fullness, short breath vanish. Eat, drink and smoke all you want. Results guaranteed. Maker gives money back if not delighted.

HOLLYWOOD AND GOTHAM HAPPENINGS: LOCAL AMUSEMENT COMMENT

Hollywood's Happy Ending Complex Gives Way to Tragic Fadeouts

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1931, by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, March 11

What has become of Hollywood's happy ending complex, which has inspired so many jibes?

At Warner Brothers and First National alone, seven scheduled pictures are to end on a tragic note.

In John Barrymore's "Svengali," both Barrymore and the heroine die. In "Woman of the World," Bebe Daniels goes to jail, and as she is receiving sentence her love [illegible] noble, [illegible] girl, Bob Montgomery, is killed in "Public Enemy." Richard Barthelmess dies in "The Finger Points" and Edward G. Robinson will die in "The Idol." Barrymore's next film, "The Gen-John Barrymore. ius," also has an unhappy ending. There are two versions to the finish of "Upper Underworld." In one the leading man is killed, and in the other his daughter.

And is not Paramount filming "An American Tragedy?"

For all its extravagances and its eccentricities, Hollywood daily is robbing its critics of their ammunition.

Maybe you haven't heard the one about John Barrymore's reply to a mid-western critic.

It seems that the scribe took exception to the star's performance in a play and, among other things, suggested that he needed a haircut.

When shown the clipping, Barrymore smiled wryly.

"I've played in great cities, towns and hamlets," he said, "but this is the first time I have ever found the local barber as the dramatic critic."

LATEST GOSSIP

Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks will have an eleventh wedding anniversary on March 31. They'll have to celebrate it apart, as Doug is hunting tigers in the Orient. Director George Fitzmaurice is back in bed with a relapse of the flu. The manager of a neighborhood theater in Hollywood had to turn up the house lights and rout the kids out during the run of "Tom Sawyer." They would stay in for two and three runs of the picture.

One of Raoul Walsh's race horses broke his leg at Agua Caliente last week and had to be destroyed. The animal was to have been in the famous Cofroth handicap. The director was to back him with $5,000 on a side-bet against one of Al Jolson's horses. Walsh still has 12 animals in his stable. One of them is named "Flagg" and another, "The Big Trail." (They say he gets off to a faster start than the picture.) Joe E. Brown is the manager of a baseball team made up of former professionals. His club played Buster Keaton's team last Saturday and faced the Chicago Cubs in Catalina yesterday. In the old days Joe played second base for the Venice.

Lew Sloane, of the [illegible] team of De Sylva, Brown and Henderson, takes a parting shot that there is no art in Hollywood.

Wasn't it Mr. Brent who wrote the words for "Yes We Have No Bananas?"

Joe E. Brown

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"Lysistrata"—Lys as in listen, is as in hiss, stra as in straw, ta as in ta-ta—will be presented in the Alvin next week with a cast headed by Mr. and Mrs. Coburn, remembered for "The Better 'Ole" and other better plays. Furthermore—we wouldn't keep it from you—you can buy seats for it tomorrow. Even Friday, if you prefer.

Everything eventually sums up, they say. Among actors there are now as many vests covering empty stomachs as there are hats covering—well—what actors' hats cover.

Francis X. Bushman and Anne Forrest, who will try to break the "Thin Ice" in the Pitt next week, have both had screen experience, and we won't argue about which one is most glad about going to perform with the other. But Mabel Kroman is all excited about getting a chance to act with Francis X. Alice Baker is looking for some new gowns. So George Sharp is thinking about making 'em all buy tickets for the show.

A little laughter, a little pain—that is the way of life. In trying to put it on the stage it often happens that pain results where laughter is intended.

Curb your impatience, please. Next Monday marks the opening of the sale of seats for "Strange Interlude." Eugene O'Neill's nine-act drama, lasting from 5:30 until 11, with a time allowance for a knife-and-fork drill. Daylight will be conserved by making no use of it whatever, since there will be no matinees.

When an actress, for the sake of publicity, claims she has "lost her jewels" she actually has lost at least one, for truth is a jewel.

Boy Actor

Leon Janney, boy actor of the films who is now appearing in the Stanley in person, is to open a week's engagement on the Enright stage Friday.

MARLENE DIETRICH PORTRAYS SPY ROLE

Marlene Dietrich, whose beauty has won the plaudits and the panegyrics of screen audiences and film critics since her American debut in "Morocco," deliberately will sacrifice that beauty in certain sequences of her new picture, "Dishonored."

In this Josef von Sternberg production she plays an Austrian spy ordered to service in Russia during the early days of the war. As a disguise she assumes the station of a peasant woman; a maid in an old inn used as military quarters.

Her make-up as the peasant maid is as unflattering as has ever been assumed by an actress on stage or screen, according to James Collins, head of the make-up department at the studios.

WALTER WINCHELL On Broadway

(Copyright, 1931, by Daily Mirror, Inc.)

Danny, me boy, you're a regular fellow.
Lend me your ear for a moment or two.
Lately the moon's been a glamorous yellow:
Winter is fading and April is due.
I have been living in monkish seclusion.
Shunning the sex oft referred to as frail.
Yet the reward has been mainly delusion—
And I've decided to break out of jail.
Dan, keep your eye out, for I'm in the market:
I'd like a maid with a flower-like face.
Why own a car if there's no urge to park it?
I'm growing bored at my slumbering pace.
Pick me a winner—blonde, brunette or red-head.
Charming and poised to the highest degree.
If she won't mind stepping out with a deadhead—
Rope her and tie her and ship her to me!

—Kid Kazanova.

Haw!

Max Benoff, of the Bronx, tells of a Mrs. Worthington Mefoofsky who had been reading Winchell for a long time. So for the first time the other day she decided to surprise her husband with some slanguage when he came home from the pants pressing shop.

When Mr. Mefoofsky staggered in from the long day's grind, she rushed up to him and with her right hand outstretched, and shouted:

"Mitt me, beeg boy, mitt me!"

"My gowd!" shrieked Mr. Mefoofsky as he ran to the street, "somebody gat me a doctur qvick! Mine vife has gone crazy. I know her for de past toity years and now she vants me I should meet her!"

The Retort Snippy

Miss Guinan (to facetious newspapermen): "You're driving me to my grave!"

Facetious Newspaperman: "You didn't expect to walk—did you?"

A Form of Criticism

J. Marson asserts that George Bernard Shaw's caustic comebacks have more dynamite in them than any Dorothy Parker offered. There was the woman, he points out, who trapped Shaw into listening to a young violinist. After a long and heavy solo the woman asked Shaw his opinion.

"He reminds me," said Shaw "of Paderewski."

"But," butted the crimson-faced woman, "Paderewski isn't a violinist!"

"Indeed!" groaned Shaw.

Anything for a Laugh

Leave it to Charles Dillingham, the producer, to let his sense of humor run away from him at the most depressing places. There was the time when he attended Houdini's funeral. As they were carrying out the they were carrying out the casket Dillingham nudged another mourner and whispered:

"Wouldn't it be funny if Houdini wasn't in there?"

Now they say that during the A. L. Erlanger funeral Dillingham (who was in business with Abe Erlanger) looked over the mourners and then turned to Ziegfeld, saying:

"Gee, Abe didn't sell out."

By Way of Report

You simply can't keep up with the numerous historians who give their own accounts of how this or that originated. Now comes a booklet from a New Orleans bank which includes information on how the name "Dixie" started.

The Citizens' Bank, to quote the booklet, gave the South its pet name of Dixie. "The principal bills issued by the Citizens' Bank were in $10 denominations. They were engraved in English on one side and French on the other. On the French side the word DIX was very prominent and means 'ten.'"

The booklet continues:

GONE 3 WEEKS, HUNT GIRL

Police have been asked to search for Stella Caldart, 15, of Bridgeville, missing from her home since February 18. She left home telling her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Renego Caldart, she was going to work in Dormont and nothing has been heard from her since, according to the police.

The girl, described as being 5 feet 2½ inches tall and weighing 130 pounds, was wearing a brown cloth coat, light tan silk stockings and black pumps when last seen. She wore no hat, having heavy brown hair.

A. F. Woodside, a brother-in-law, 834 Tripoli street, North Side, reported the girl's disappearance, asking that he be notified when the girl was located.

the Mississippi Valley, who did not know the French pronunciation, called the bills "dixies," and Louisiana came to be known as the "Land of the Dixies," or "Dixie-land." This inspired Daniel Decatur Emmett, and in 1859, he composed the original "Dixie Land" for a minstrel show, then performing in New York . . . This crude song was later rewritten by Gen. Albert Pike, who gave it the battle thrill that makes "Dixie" immortal and stamps the name Dixie upon the South.

In Fewer Words

Resuming the reported discussion here, viz: "What is the most perfectly rounded sentence?" a group at the Players Club agreed that the most expressive line in dramatic literature was in "Lulu Belle" (by Edward Sheldon and Charles MacArthur). It was the description of the leading character: "She was young — beautiful — and bad!"

With a Vengeance

The war between the ticket speculators and the Theater League (which was formed to put the specs out of business) is over, you know, but what we started out to report was that the league wound up at the brokers' mercy.

In giving up the struggle to lick the specs, the league made the bargain with the speculators: The specs agreed to assume the obligation of liquidating the league's indebtedness!

"In consideration of this friendly act on the part of the brokers," wrote Henry Moskowitz, of the league, to the theater managers and producers, "we trust they will be accorded treatment on the part of your management."

In other words, the specs were burglars and what-nots while the "war" was on, and the public was to be "protected" from their so-called "gypping." Now that the specs are assuming their debts, it is perfectly all right.

Money doesn't only talk. It laughs.

Kidding a Kidder

"It must be wonderful to be as famous as Walter Winchell," says the Broadway Numbe. of the Notre Dame Juggler. "We understand his column will soon be translated into French, German, Spanish, Polish and English."

Isnay Eyemay Acefay Edray?

Gag

Isadore Elinson, the column's favorite gagman, would have you believe that it happened at a movie opening the other night. A well-known star, gorgeously gowned, was ankling her way into the theater.

"Gee, she's lucky," ejaculated an ardent fan along the sidelines, "she musta been born with a silver spoon in her mouth."

"Yeah," grumbled a bit of a critic, "her latest talkie sounds like it's still in there!

When a Child is FEVERISH, CROSS, UPSET

Colic, gas, sour belching, frequent vomiting, feverishness, in babies and children, generally show food is souring in the little digestive tract.

When these symptoms appear, give Baby a teaspoonful of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. Add it to the first bottle of food in the morning. Older children should be given a tablespoonful in a glass of water. This will comfort the child—make his stomach and bowels easy. In five minutes he is comfortable, happy. It will sweep the bowels free of all sour, indigestible food. It opens the bowels in constipation, colds, children's ailments. Children take it readily because it is palatable, pleasant-tasting.

Learn its many uses for mother and child. Write for the interesting book, "Useful Information." Address The Phillips Co., 170 Varick St., New York, N. Y. It will be sent FREE.

In buying, be sure to get genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. Doctors have prescribed it for over 50 years.

FREIGHT THEFT SUSPECTS HELD

Andrew Lazusky, 19, of Monaca, and Joseph Gondak, 18, of Groveton, accused of breaking seals on 24 box cars in the Ivanhoe yard of the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad, near Groveton, and stealing interstate freight, were held for court by the United States commissioner.

Among the articles listed as stolen were many cases of cigarets, a vacuum sweeper, soap, coffee, candy, metal curtain rods, toys, chewing gum and waxed wrapping paper. Both defendants were said to have made statements admitting the thefts.

Chester Nisneski, 36, of Groveton, charged with having purchased some of the cigarets, was held for court under $500 bond on a charge of receiving stolen goods. The other two were committed to jail in default of bonds pending trial.

NOW SEE WHAT KONJOLA DOES

Three More Convincing Proofs of the Power of This Remarkable Medicine.

No medicine ever became famous by accident. Results are what count, and Konjola can be counted on for results in cases of stomach, liver, kidney and bowel troubles, and of rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness.

MRS. H. LEWIN

Take, for instance, the experience of Mrs. H. Lewin, 505 Marie Ave., Avalon, Pa., who says: "A year ago I began to have trouble with my stomach; gas pains and indigestion made me a nervous wreck. I was rundown, had no energy and had frequent headaches. I used Konjola for six weeks, and can eat anything. Now everyone in our family is taking Konjola."

WILLIAM CHARLTON

And read the words of Mr. William B. Charlton, 12 Boston St., Pittsburgh: "For six months I could not eat without suffering from cramps. Pain kept me awake at night. But four bottles of Konjola did the work, and I am telling all my friends about this medicine."

MARIE DeGARMO

And Mrs. Marie DeGarmo, 419 West North Ave., Pittsburgh, declares: "My husband suffered from stomach trouble for fifteen years and my mother-in-law was rundown and weak, and I was a victim of nervousness. My husband tried Konjola first, and when this medicine ended his stomach ailment my mother-in-law and I began using it. Six bottles did wonders for mother and Konjola quickly quieted my nerves."

Konjola contains no alcohol, no nerve deadening drugs, no heart depressing chemicals. It needs no such ingredients. Don't wonder about Konjola—ask your druggist. He knows what Konjola has done and is doing. Konjola is sold by all Dow, Liggett and Mayflower drug stores and by all best druggists in Pittsburgh and vicinity.

GARAGE SLAYING MYSTERY CLEARED

SIDEWALKS of PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

Ben Anderson and his boss, E. V. Babcock, the county commissioner, gave a luncheon yesterday to Leo Sack, the Washington newspaperman. In Mr. Babcock's absence, Ben officiated and told an audience of newspapermen the story of Smith and Jones. It was a story of two letters, which read:

William Pfarr

"Mr. Jones: About that $200 I owe you, I want to talk to you about it in my office tomorrow.—Smith."

"Mr. Smith: Received your circular letter and will be there. —Jones."

A mild-mannered gentleman, who looked like Mr. Pym, of "Passing By" fame, went into a downtown book store. He wanted a book. Its name, he said, was "Kiss and Tell Again," or something like that. This store boasts that it either has or can quickly get any book ever published. No one could identify the name of such a book or anything approaching it—even after all the catalogs had been carefully scanned. Finally one bright female attache ventured to ask:

"You do not happen to mean 'Women Have Been Kind,' do you?" That is the title of the autobiography of Lou Tellegen, actor and former husband of Geraldine Farrar, the famous singer, in which he tells of his various and numerous love adventures.

"That is the very book," the Pym-like person said.

It was some years ago, and Muldowney needed his votes for candidates other than Little.

But, lo and behold, when the returns were posted, there was Little's name and there was his vote—one!

A few days later Muldowney sought out Little and said:

"I'd like to explain how you got that vote. There's a voter in my district who thought it was Louis Little, not Harry, who was running."

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., March 11.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

The biggest thing in legislation nowadays is the different states' race for the divorce business. Arkansaw guarantees a divorce in three months, including room and board. Nevada heard about it and called a special session of their Legislature and says: "We will give you one in six weeks, and if any other state goes under that time, we will give you a divorce, marriage, and another divorce all for the same time, and price. In other words that's our business, we have built it up to what it is today. If there had been no Reno, you would still have been living with the same old gal, so remember we are the state that will divorce you, even if we have to do it by telegraph."

Clemenceau Won To Pershing View Of American Army

MY EXPERIENCES IN THE WORLD WAR

By GEN. JOHN J. PERSHING

Commander-in-Chief, American Expeditionary Forces.

Succeeding chapters of "My Experiences in the World War" will appear daily and Sunday exclusively in the Sun-Telegraph.

CHAPTER LIX.

I called on Prime Minister Clemenceau in Paris August 13, 1918, and told him of my visit to British Army Headquarters. We spoke of the progress toward formation of an American Army. A record of what he said, as set down in my notes, follows:

"M. Clemenceau told me that when I first began insisting on using American divisions in an American Army under an American commander, he frankly did not agree with me, but that he wished to say to me now that I was right and that everyone who was against me on this proposition was wrong; that he fully agreed with me now that the Americans should operate separately as an American Army."

Gen. Pershing

We then discussed a telegram he had received from Lloyd George, endeavoring to arrange for a number of American divisions to be retained with the British. This message was handed to me by M. Clemenceau. In part, Mr. Lloyd George said:

"I did not ask for the transfer of American divisions to the British front. The brilliant part taken by them in the second great Marne victory has more than justified the use made of them. What I asked was that a few American divisions at most from among those recently arrived in France and who could not be put in the line without some training should be sent to complete their training behind the British lines.

Cited British Shipping

"My purpose was to form a reserve capable of being used in the critical situation of a break on our front by the enemy, permitting the holding with our local reserves until the arrival of divisions from the general reserve of the Allied armies on the Western Front.

"I did not consider my demand excessive, for it must not be forgotten that the greater part of the American troops were brought to France by British shipping, and that because of the sacrifices made to furnish this shipping our people have the right to expect that more than five divisions of the 28 now in France should be put in training behind our lines.

"We are informed that serious attack on the British front is still probable now. I do not wish to hamper you now, but in the interest of that unity of command for which I made so great an effort I urgently ask you to support the very modest request made by me from our commander-in-chief."

Not only were the British anxious to get our units, but the whole question of the employment of American troops continued to be considered among the Allies. One program the British clung to contemplated the use of Dunkirk as the supply port for an American army they hoped would be sent to their front for service under their control.

M. Clemenceau told me the Italian ambassador and Mr. Lloyd George had been in conference in London regarding the disposition of our troops, the former urging that every influence be brought to bear upon Marshal Foch and myself to obtain divisions for Italy.

This was not the first time the British had shown an interest in having our units go to Italy, having previously suggested that they

ELECTRICIANS OPEN MEET

A joint convention of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, the Association of Iron and Steel Electrical Engineers, and the Engineers' Society of Western Pennsylvania, electrical section, opened today in the William Penn Hotel.

William S. Lee, president of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, asserted that government operation within the electrical industry should be limited to the exercise of its power function of regulation.

E. C. Stone, of Pittsburgh, vice president of the same organization, formally opened the sessions.

More than 1,000 members representing large electrical utility companies are expected in attendance. The American Institute section represents Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, West Virginia and a portion of Ohio.

Speakers at the opening session included G. Southerland and D. S. MacCorkle, of New York; J. Slepian and A. P. Strom, Pittsburgh; S. S. Atwood and W. G. Dow, University of Michigan; and W. Krausnick, Ohio Northern University. The afternoon schedule listed A. H. Kehoe, Bassett Jones, R. M. Stanley, C. T. Sinclair, H. S. Davis and W. R. Ross.

Social features arranged for the three days open with a theater party tonight.

Wife Slaying Trial Goes to Jury Today

The jury was expected to begin late today consideration of its verdict in the murder case against Janes C. Gray, Negro, 26, who has been on trial all week before Visiting Judge C. M. Culver, of Bradford County in Criminal Court, charged with shooting his wife, Lelia May Gray at their home in Natrona Mine road, Morgan, Pa., November 11. Gray claimed the shooting was accidental.

Double Funeral For Brothers, 1 Fire Victim

Joint funeral services will be held Friday for two brothers.

John L. Griffin, 60, caretaker of the summer camp at Undercliffe, was burned to death Sunday night when fire destroyed a cottage at the camp.

His brother, Jerry, about 40, of 5159 Kincaid street, was stricken with pneumonia about a week ago and was not told of his brother's death. He died last night at his home.

Services will be held Friday morning in the W. N. Winter funeral home, 4730 Friendship avenue, with requiem high mass in St. Mary's Church.

2 CHILDREN GET $7,977,972

Distribution of $7,977,972.29 of personal property in the estate of G. Harton Singer, of Edgeworth, shown by the account of the executors, was ordered by a decree in Orphans Court. G. Harton Singer, Jr., a son, receives $3,929,369.50 outright and the same amount is placed in trust for a daughter, Hester Singer Semple, with her brother and the Fidelity Title and Trust Company as trustees, after deductions for taxes and smaller items.

The two beneficiaries elected to take their shares "in kind," and the decree apportions to them United States Steel Corporation stock, municipal and other bonds comprising the essets. Singer died June 22, 1929, and under his will divided his real estate and personal property equally between his son, and daughter, the latter's share to be held in trust for her during life with the right of disposing of the estate by her will.

Bad Management Charged City in Wharf Parking And Market Houses

A letter pointing out wasteful management of the wharf parking stations under the Department of Public Safety, and of the City County Building and market houses under the Bureau of City Property, has been sent to City Council by the Pittsburgh Building Owners and Managers Association.

The letter, addressed to John S. Herron, president of Council, suggests a conference at which the Building Owners and Managers offer to submit all of the facts they have developed regarding conditions at the parking stations along the Monongahela and Allegheny river points.

Resolutions are included urging Council to give consideration to the operating conditions in the market houses and City-County Building as set forth in two reports by the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board last spring. The letter is signed by A. H. Clarke, president of the Building Owners and Managers, and J. W. Danford, chairman of the tax committee.

Regarding the wharf parking revenue, the Building owners point out that the city gets a net income from the properties, after deductions for payroll, of only $8,000 to $11,000 a year and could get $50,000 under private management. The Monongahela wharf has space estimated at 275,105 square feet and the Allegheny wharf 173,203 square feet.

The letter states:

"Based on reliable information on what similar lots throughout the city are now bringing, it is assumed that these two areas of space might be leased by the city for not less than $50,000 a year rental which would give the city a gross income free of all charges of $50,000 against a present income of $8,000 to $11,000.

The Building owners declare they are in favor of cheap parking in the downtown area, but suggest that the limit of 15 cents might be set up as the daily charge rather than 10 cents.

Reduction in taxes is given as their motive in calling the matter to the attention of authorities.

Council is asked to consider two reports by the Real Estate Board showing how large sums of money can be saved in the management of the City-County Building and the market houses. No action has ever been taken on the recommendations, so far as the Building Owners have been able to discover.

The Real Estate Board reports charged that all of the buildings are grossly overmanned, that operating costs are excessive, and rentals and service in the markets both below standard.

The Diamond Market costs $2.35 a square foot to operate compared with operating costs in a typical office building of $1.00 a square foot. The loss in the Diamond Market last year was $25,000, including money spent to reduce a bonded indebtedness.

CONFESSION CREDITED TO PRISONER

Man 'Breaks' After Reading Bible, Admits Murder and Auto Theft, Police Report

The murder more than two weeks ago of William A. McClintock, 35, attendant in the R. H. Schmitt Company garage, 7827 Hamilton avenue, was cleared today, detectives said, with the alleged confession of John A. Schulkins, 31, of 7819½ Hamilton avenue.

After denying complicity in the crime since his arrest last Friday in a cabin at Spruce Creek, near Altoona, Schulkins "broke" last night, according to Lieut. Frank Ferris, of the homicide squad, and admitted the slaying. The alleged confession followed his reading of the Bible for the last two days.

WOUNDED IN FLIGHT

The prisoner was quoted as telling detectives he shot McClintock after stealing an automobile from the garage, when the attendant tried to block his escape. Schulkins dropped his revolver after shooting McClintock, who picked up the weapon and shot Schulkins, wounding him in the thighs three times. McClintock later died of his wound.

Schulkins denied a charge that he had taken 70 cents from the victim, according to detectives. He was quoted as saying he wanted the automobile to visit his wife in Elkton, O.

REVOLVER TRACED

His arrest was made by Homicide Detectives Frank Morgan and John Riley, who traced the secret serial number of the revolver used in the shooting. The outer numbers had been removed. Investigation showed Schulkins' hiding place in Spruce Creek, and his subsequent arrest by the detectives, who enlisted the aid of state police.

Two of three bullets which struck Schulkins passed through the thigh. The remaining one was to be removed today at Mercy Hospital, after which Schulkins will be turned over to the coroner on a murder charge.

3 HELD IN STORE ROBBERIES

Accused of holding up the restaurant of George Gregory in Brackenridge avenue, Brackenridge, and of stealing confections from the Y. M. C. A. at Tarentum, three youths were to be given hearings today before Justice of the Peace William Bew, of Brackenridge.

They were Arthur Barr, 21; Clarence E. Montgomery, 21, and Clarence Lawther, 16, all of Brackenridge. They were arrested late yesterday by Patrolmen Joseph Myers, of Brackenridge police, and Joseph Pierre, of Tarentum police.

Guilty in False Alarms, Test Sanity

John Smith, 45, was found guilty in Criminal Court today of sounding three false fire alarms downtown in a half hour on the night of January 31. ACTION HELD UP IN 9 EAGLE RUM CASES

Illegal Raid Charge Blocks Disposal; Court Closes Barroom at One Aerie

Final hearings of injunction suits in Federal Court, filed by prohibition authorities against Pittsburgh Aerie No. 76, Fraternal Order of Eagles, and Eagle aeries in Homestead, McKeesport, Charleroi, New Kensington, Monongahela, Johnstown, Indiana and Dubois, have been continued by Judge F. P. Schoonmaker until June 2.

They were set back because all the defendant aeries accused of violating the prohibition law have petitions pending before Judge Nelson McVicar seeking suppression of evidence and quashing of search warrants executed in raids.

The California aerie under the decree is permitted to keep open its clubrooms by posting a $1,000 bond against further violations of the dry law on the premises. The barroom of the Monessen Eagles was ordered "padlocked" for one year but the rest of the building may be used by posting a $1,000 bond against further liquor violations. In each case the court directed the premises to be open to prohibition agents for inspection at all times.

Final hearings in the other nine suits were sent back pending a decision by Judge McVicar on legality of raids made on clubrooms.

A total of 33 injunction suits were scheduled yesterday for final hearings but decrees were handed down in 16. Eleven were continued and six suits were dismissed.

A decree was handed down directing a one-year padlock on the barroom of the German Beneficial Union Canonsburg, and ordering officers to post bond against further violations.

NEW CAR DESIGN ADDS TO SPEED

Greater speed through streamline design for locomotives, railway cars and interurban traction cars without additional power requirements has been worked out by research engineers, it was announced today by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company.

Two years were devoted to a series of tests under direction of Dr. Oscar G. Tietjens, to determine the benefits that could be derived from changes in design. Engineers declare operating costs will be reduced and better transportation service available at a saving despite the cost to change the equipment operating at speeds of 35 or more miles an hour.

3 GAS STATIONS HELD UP

The bandit pair preying on gasoline stations struck again last night, obtaining $102 in holdups of two stations in the city and another in Sharpsburg.

From the service station of the Sun Oil Company, 6581 Hamilton avenue, $30 was obtained by an armed man who threatened Joseph Larkin, an attendant, of 907 South Millvale avenue. The man fled in an automobile driven by an accomplice.

A similar holdup was staged by the thug at the Pure Oil Company station in Bigelow boulevard near the Bloomfield Bridge. Daniel Scanlon, the attendant, was robbed of $35.

The thugs made their last stop at the station of the American Oil Company, Nineteenth and Main streets, Sharpsburg, where they obtained $37.

Held up by an armed highwayman at East North avenue and Sandusky street last night, Adolph Schmitt, of 501 Foreland street, said he was robbed of a watch valued at $45.

School Board Bill Opposed by Teachers

Opposition to the Rooney bill now before the Legislature, proposing an elected and salaried school board, was voiced in a resolution passed at the annual meeting of the Pittsburgh Teachers' Association, composed of 3,500 teachers, last night. A telegram expressing the organization's views was sent to Harrisburg.

Miss Adaline Van Kirk was re-elected president. Frank Harper, of the Chamber of Commerce, was the principal speaker.

World War Vet's Illness Puzzling

The condition of Chalmers L. Medsger, 38, 438 West Swissvale avenue, Edgewood, suffering from a puzzling malady, was reported as being "good" this morning, according to word from his home.

Medsger, stricken by a cold Sunday, became violently ill late yesterday and was attended by Wilkinsburg firemen, who worked with an inhalator at his bedside for several hours.

Medsger, a World War veteran, was gassed.

STANDARD RATING SCALE

for Electric Refrigeration

- Is the refrigerator manufactured by a reliable company with proper experience in the electric refrigeration field?
- Has it plenty of food and shelf space?
- Is the cabinet itself well designed, sturdily built and properly insulated?
- Is there provision for the freezing of an adequate supply of ice cubes? (Quantity of ice rather than number of cubes, which may be of large or small size, should be taken into consideration.)
- Will the refrigerator constantly maintain a proper temperature for the preservation of foods?
- Can the freezing of ice cubes and desserts be speeded up when the need arises?
- Can this extra freezing speed for ice cubes be had without affecting the temperature on the food shelves? (Too low a temperature on the shelves will, of course, injure food).
- Is there a place to keep ice cream, meat, fish, game, "quick frosted" foods or extra ice cubes indefinitely at a below freezing temperature?
- Are these various temperatures (a. extra fast freezing; b. fast freezing; c. below freezing for storage and d. normal food preservation temperature automatically maintained without any attention from the owner?
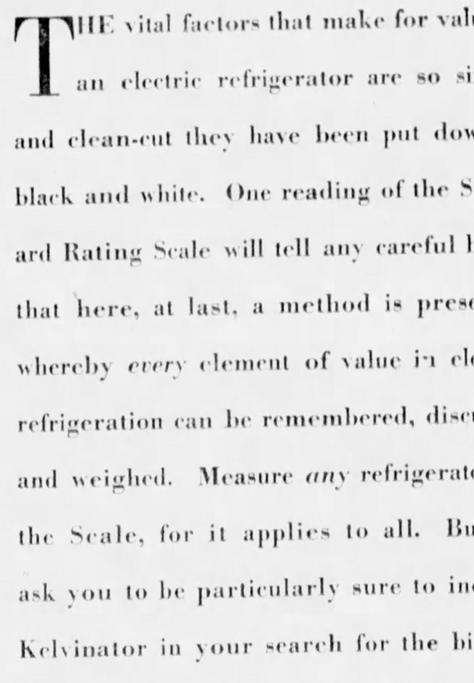
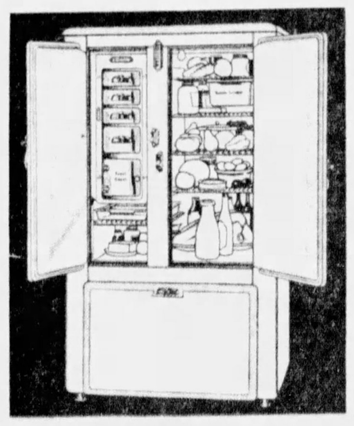
- Does the refrigerating unit operate often or infrequently? (The fewer "stops" and "starts" the longer the unit will last and the less it costs to run).
- How long will the cooling unit continue to cool the refrigerator even though the current is shut off? (Refrigeration should continue for 10 or 12 hours).
- Can the back parts of all shelves, even the lowest, be reached without kneeling or sitting down?
- Has provision been made for keeping vegetables fresh and crisp?
- Can the refrigerator top be used to "set things down for a moment" while the contents of the cabinet are being rearranged?
- Will the refrigerator add to the attractiveness of the kitchen?
- Has the experience of users over a long period of years proved the refrigerator long-lived and dependable.





THE vital factors that make for value in an electric refrigerator are so simple and clean-cut they have been put down in black and white. One reading of the Standard Rating Scale will tell any careful buyer that here, at last, a method is presented whereby every element of value in electric refrigeration can be remembered, discussed and weighed. Measure any refrigerator by the Scale, for it applies to all. But we ask you to be particularly sure to include Kelvinator in your search for the biggest values; only a measurement like the Scale can show the quality of Kelvinator compared with that of all others. See if that isn't true. Phone or write for a detailed discussion of the Scale.

Women Hear About Work Of Court

Mrs. H. M. Bichel, president of the Oakmont Woman's Club, has been made president of the newly organized Community House Association, which is looking about for a piece of property suited to the purpose which its name implies. Both men's and women's organizations of the borough are included in the new group.

The Woman's Club met yesterday in the Presbyterian Church and heard a talk full of human interest as well as humor by Miss Grace DeHaven Woodrow of Morals Court. Under the title "Morals Court and Its Problems" Miss Woodrow told of the cases that are heard there—youths with too much freedom, incorrigibles, girls from the street, shoplifters and "lady drunks." The latter range in age from 50 to 72 and Miss Woodrow says frequently lecture the young offenders even more severely than a court attache would dare.

Each individual is the unit in a big social problem, Miss Woodrow explained, and each case is treated individually. She stressed the need for recreational and vocational activities for women prisoners and for those quarantined.

Mrs. Thomas H. Gray, accompanied by Miss Alberta Yeaglin, provided the music for the afternoon and the program also included a demonstration of a dry cleaning machine.

Reger accompanying.

KNOTTED BOLEROS AND SHORT CAPES FAVORED IN PARIS

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, March 11.—This season we are to be asked to shoulder our sartorial responsibilities in the form of little knotted boleros and shallow capes knotted on the shoulder. Whether the poor heating system that is such an unpleasant feature of so many European homes is to be held to account for this new note, we know not. But just the same, it is mighty pleasant to be able to wear such a bolero or shallow cape over one's filmy evening frock without being accused of approaching old age or looking like a bad case of rheumatism.

JANE REGNY was one of the very first to feature the bolero, which she uses to accompany everything from a simple sports frock and beach pajamas to an elaborate evening gown. Lelong and Worth are both showing some most intriguing little capes of chiffon and fur and we imagine that week-end parties in draughty old homes will be more popular now that one of the worst of their drawbacks has been eliminated. For once, a smart and charming fashion built on a practical foundation.

WE SHOW TODAY a sketch of one of the Jane Regny boleros, this one worn with a most formal evening gown. It is of brocaded lame and chiffon. The material of brown chiffon has a pattern of small gold squares scattered all over. A knotted scarf fastens the shallow bolero in front over a pastel toned frock.

* * *

THE LOWER SKETCH shows a short evening cape from Lelong's new collection. Cut circular-dipping in back and worn open over one shoulder, it is of brown chiffon with curving bands of sable marten that swing up in a graceful line to be knotted over the shoulder with a bow of the fur.

WATER BILLING CHANGE NEAR

Change in the method of billing water to users in large buildings and skyscrapers will be made by City Controller James P. Kerr, he announced today.

Following complaint by J. W. Bamford, of the Koppers Building, that the present method of billing large consumers of water using more than one meter, wreaked a hardship on the consumers in that they were unable to take advantage of savings, Controller Kerr decided upon the plan. He asked Council yesterday what they thought of his course of action and was given approval to make any changes he saw fit.

The new method resulted in mailing large consumers separate bills for every meter installed and has been in use since January 1 last. The old method, which will be put into use again, gives the consumer a single bill with the advantage of saving on bulk quantities, no matter how many meters are installed in the premises.

BOSTON, March 11.—(AP.)—Miss Phillis Ellsworth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Chess Ellsworth, of Boston, was married to Clarence Douglas Dillon, son of Clarence Dillon, New York financier, in Emmanual Church yesterday.

The bride made her debut two seasons ago and is a member of the Junior League and the Vincent Club. Dillon was manager of the Harvard football team during the past season and will be graduated in June. The couple will make their home in New York City.

Lion Hungry, Modern Daniel's Act Halted

PANAMA CITY, March 11.—(AP.)—Juan Ortiz, reporter, can't be a Daniel. He bet he could enter a circus lion's cage and come out alive. The mayor halted the exhibition on the ground the beast hadn't been fed for three days. The mayor also revoked the permit of the circus.

Chicks as Easter Favors, Banned by Society

The Western Pennsylvania Humane Society has a mutual agreement with Pittsburgh dealers not to sell less than six baby chicks to any one person in an attempt to discourage indulgent parents from giving them to children for Easter toys and playthings, or using them as dinner favors at Easter time.

According to Edwin M. Smith, chief agent and W. F. H. Kentzel, secretary of the society, dealers have escaped prosecution under the act of March 29, 1869, by active co-operation to prevent the willful abuse or neglect or cruelty to chicks they sell.

Men are posted near chick counters, in stores to question buyers of small numbers of chicks as to their probable disposal.

The Human Society objects to the dyeing of chicks in Easter colors by hatcheries, because the dye is injurious to the chick.

Kotex fits inconspicuously and it is soft, comfortable, disposable

KOTEX keeps you free of self-consciousness at times when sanitary protection is necessary. It is skillfully shaped to fit securely. It absorbs five times more than surgical cotton—absorbs away from the surface, not in one concentrated area. This method of lateral absorption leaves your protection dry and comfortable far longer than the ordinary pad.

It may be worn on either side with equal protection. There is no chance of getting it adjusted wrong—no possibility of embarrassment.

Kotex has not merely an apparent softness, but a lasting softness. It is treated to deodorize effectively. Hospitals use quantities of Kotex and also the soft absorbent material of which it is made. Kotex is disposable, as you know, quickly, easily—first of all its advantages over old-time methods.

MY EXPERIENCES IN THE WORLD WAR

By GEN. JOHN J. PERSHING,

PERSHING PLAN FOUND RIGHT BY FRENCH

be grouped with the British forces there.

Another proposal which was again submitted to Marshal Foch about this time by the other Allies was that of placing American infantry and other services in the reduced divisions of all the principal Allies, British, French and Italian, but the French had changed their attitude and were opposed to any of these schemes, none of which ever came up for formal consideration.

It was surprising to find Mr. Lloyd George lending himself to any of these plans in view of his positive declaration at the Abbeville conference in favor of the formation and use of an American army as such.

Surprising Attitude

It was also difficult to reconcile the attitude indicated in his message with his promise on several occasions, made unconditionally, to supply all possible shipping to carry out the large American program recommended by the Prime Ministers and Marshal Foch.

The impression left on our minds was, first, that the British desired to discourage the concentration of our forces into one army, and, second, that perhaps there was a desire to check the growth of too friendly relations between Americans and French.

In my diary it is noted:

"Chaumont, Thursday, August 15, 1918. Senator J. Hamilton Lewis had luncheon with us yesterday. Party of congressmen and naval officers visited us today.

Senator Lewis

"Foch suggests single control of supply systems, which I do not favor.

"Wrote Sir Douglas Haig approving request that 27th and 30th Divisions remain with British temporarily to function under our Second Army Corps. Dr. Schurman, of Cornell University, called.

"Marshal Foch sent copy of proposed cable to President Wilson urging the 100-division plan. I sent back word to Foch that it would probably irritate the President, and advised against it."

Congressmen Interested

The Congressional party mentioned in my diary included Congressmen L. P. Padgett, J. J. Riordan, F. C. Hicks, S. E. Mudd, W. B. Oliver, W. J. Browning, and Paymaster J. S. Higgins, who took luncheon with us; J. A. Peters, W. W. Venable, J. C. Wilson, J. R. Farr, J. R. Connelly, W. L. Hensley, T. S. Butler, T. D. Schall, Capt. R. H. Jackson, and Lieut. M. H. Anderson, of the Navy.

Our members of Congress from home were always welcome, and particular care was taken to give them opportunity to become acquainted as far as practicable with our plans and the state of our preparations.

The members of this group of Representatives were intensely interested, each one especially so in what the units from his own section of the country were doing.

They were shown through our organization at General Headquarters, and the projects we were about to undertake were explained to them. As representatives elected by the people, their personal and official interest in our effort and their expressed belief in our success were encouraging to me and to the command.

In its practical application through the Military Board of Allied Supply, our theory of pooling certain supplies was proving effective in solving a number of supply questions of greater or less importance.

There was, however, a tendency to carry it beyond the limits of the original conception under which it operated, and the suggestion was presented that it be made general, with the entire control under one supreme head.

Against Single Control

To get my views, Marshal Foch sent one of his officers to discuss it with my staff, but I thought we had gone as far as safe in this direction. The question of handling our supplies was bound up with our system of ports, depots and means of transportation to such an extent that the details of its control could not be delegated to any other authority.

While strategical control of the armies had been placed in the hands of the Allied commander-in-chief, the responsibility for their tactical direction necessarily remained in the hands of their respective commanders.

If there had been a general mingling of units regardless of national integrity, then a general supply system applicable to the entire front under a single direction might have been logical. But it was only by establishing the principle of unanimity that even the Inter-Allied Board was made acceptable, as no Commander-in-Chief would forego control of his supplies any more than he would yield the military command over his army.

The system of co-ordination was already doing excellent service, and in my opinion it was more satisfactory than any plan of arbitrary control could be. Among other things, such problems as procurement of labor, storage facilities and forage supply were in process of solution.

A reserve of light railway material and of motor transport, though small, was being formed, and systematic methods of handling traffic were being studied.

I took early occasion to explain my views to Marshal Foch, and convinced him that the suggestion of a supreme head for supplies was not practicable, at the same time urging an extension of the scope of authority of the Inter-Allied Board as far as possible, without interfering with the machinery of supply behind each army.

GEN. PERSHING, SECRETARY BAKER AND CONGRESSMEN VISITING IN FRANCE IN 1918

Deliveries Fall Behind

The decrease in the number of transport arrivals at this time gave apprehension. The successful handling of the immense quantity of cargo needed could only be assured by a constant flow of shipping from home ports.

Improvement in the rapidity of discharging cargo was almost instantaneous with the change made in the administrative personnel of the Services of Supply. This, combined with the fewer vessels reaching our ports, had left many idle berths.

A loss in tonnage deliveries could not readily be made up by sending larger groups of transports later on, as that would probably produce congestion and delay. We were constantly increasing the capacity of our ports and were now able to discharged 23,000 tons a day, but only 16,000 tons per day were arriving.

With the large numbers of troops then in France and the continuous arrival of others, there was danger of running still further behind in many things of which we were already short. Our imperative needs in motor transport, rolling stock for railways, construction material and signal supplies were not being met, and yet they were as indispensable as supplies for the men.

At that moment, when we were asking the French to lend us trucks, they made the same request of us. We were actually short 1,300 automobiles, thousands of trucks and all other kinds of motor vehicles. The ambulance situation was critical, several sanitary units were completely immobile, and 20 base hospitals had arrived without equipment.

It was not believed that the Secretary of War himself was kept informed of these matters, and often in reporting conditions it was requested that his especial attention be called to the cables.

Lack of Teamwork

The following shows my thought at the time, as expressed to Secretary of War Baker under date of August 17, 1918:

"Inasmuch as you asked me to speak to you frankly, I know you will permit me to refer to the subject of co-operation between here and the General Staff at Washington.

"I do so only with the view of giving you my point of view and possibly of aiding you in getting over some difficult places which I am sure you must encounter and which are beginning to effect us here. There is an impression here that our cablegrams are not being carefully studied and thoroughly co-ordinated.

"There seems to be energy enough behind things, but perhaps, it is not so well directed by the staff as it might be.

"It may possibly be due to faulty general staff organization, which, as nearly as I can learn, has not yet reached that point of perfection which would enable all these matters to be handled systematically.

"In any event, there is not the satisfactory team-work with us over here that should exist. It is not easy for me, from this distance, to understand all the reasons, but it may be due to a disinclination to accept our views.

"I fully realize that it may be difficult to get the perfection that you should have, and that there may be some of the personnel that is not entirely satisfactory. To have full co-operation, there must, of course, be entire sympathy and unity of purpose. The system should be one thoroughly tested out, such as is in operation here, and upon which every successful army organization must depend.

Suggests Change

"I have at times doubted whether you will get it going smoothly without taking someone who has actually gone through this organization here from beginning to end, as you know this is the only general staff organization that our Army has ever had. All this comes to my mind following the idea of an occasional change, of which you spoke when here as being your intention."

The tonnage allotted to our use was less in July than in June, notwithstanding our greater need. Consequently, it was again urged that more tonnage be pressed into service. Only a limited amount of the new tonnage from our own yards was then in military use, and continuance of British assistance had become doubtful.

The following cable from Mr. Lloyd George to M. Clemenceau, handed to me by the latter some days before, showed some doubt about the continuance of aid, notwithstanding the confident assurances which Mr. Lloyd George and Lord Milner had given when the increased program was discussed:

Lord Milner

"Recent dispatches from Washington give reason to believe that the United States government has abandoned its program for putting 100 divisions on the Western Front by July, 1919, and that the greatest possible number would only comprise 80 divisions.

Shipping Aid Reduced

"We have also been advised that this program reduced can only be realized if Great Britain should continue to furnish its help for naval transportation. Because of the serious character of this information, I immediately made a preliminary study of the question with Minister of Naval Transportation Sir Joseph Maclay.

Sir Joseph

"I regret to declare that we shall not be able to continue our help as far as cargoes of merchandise are concerned, and that we shall probably have to cut down tonnage assigned for troop transportation. In the last few months we have lost several troop transports of large tonnage . . .

"While continuing to do our best for the Allies in the future, as we have in the past, I think it best to let you know without delay what difficulties we may meet in attempting to realize the American program in its entirety."

Job Lack Boosts Library Reading

An increase of 16 per cent in the number of books loaned for home reading was shown in a report of Ralph Munn, director of Carnegie Library, who credits general lack of employment with the increase. During the year a gain of 470,000 books loaned was recorded.

A new readers' advisory service, under direction of a former college professor, will be established soon at the library, Munn said. It will be financed by the Buhl Foundation.

You Can't Be Dainty With A Cold In The Head

In a few deep breaths, Vapex banishes all the distress of cold

No woman can possibly be at her best with a cold. Her nose becomes red and stuffed, her head feels clogged, and the miserable distress ruins her good disposition.

Simply put a drop on the handkerchief or a drop at each end of the pillow. Breathe the delightful vapor and you breathe your cold away.

Swiftly Vapex clears the head, opens up the nose, dries secretions. A few deep breaths relieve distress and make you feel better. If a cold keeps you awake, use Vapex at night and rise in the morning refreshed and soothed.

Vapex is very inexpensive. The $1 bottle contains fifty applications—an average of only 2c apiece. Millions of bottles are sold yearly. It is approved by Good Housekeeping because it is safe for every one—even little children.

Ask your druggist for VAPEX—the original inhalant discovered during the war.

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Mother Stands Between Son And Girl He Loves

Should Sonny pass up marriage and live for mother?"

Mother thinks he should. And throws a fit if he speaks of Romance . . . even though he's a great big grown-up boy of 24 with a vote and a job.

"Are you going to let that girl come between us?" she shrieks weeping all over the lot.

Are you, perhaps, the Sonny of a Mamma like that. Or worse yet, are you by any evil chance Sonny's best girl? If you are you'll come right in on Frances' wave lengths.

"Dear Sally Martin:

"I wonder if you can't get Jimmie and me to decide what we should do. We have been going together for over a year now. He is 24 and I am 20, and we love each other. But lately his mother has been interfering with us and we don't know just what we should do. Our families met through us and everyone seemed pleased that we were going together. That is at first. Now, however, his mother seems to have turned against me and is trying to keep him from me. He is an only child but I don't think that is any excuse. Do you?

Mother Gets Hysterical

"If I were a girl who had anything to hide or be ashamed of I might understand and think she was justified and believed that she was doing it for her own good. Or if it were the first time she'd tried to act like that. But I'm not and it isn't. No one can say a word against me. I don't drink or smoke or chase to wild parties.

"He refuses to obey her and stay away from me but I can feel that she is pulling him away gradually in spite of himself. She gets hysterical and carries on something terrible. She tells him that he is 'letting me come between them.' I think she's not plain selfish because he's often told me that she never even wanted him to have friends or go out with anyone at all—even other fellows.

"He loves me. I know. But he also feels that he owes something to his mother. I don't think he does when she acts so unreasonable. And she is affecting his health with her constant nagging. Several times he's almost suggested that we get married anyway. Then he remembers his mother and says, 'Maybe she'll act differently if we wait a while.' Do you think so?

Enough to Marry

"She is the only difficulty confronting us. We are both of the same religious faith, and between us we earn enough money to marry on if I keep on working until he gets another raise.

"We have talked this over often, and now we would like the advice of someone older and more experienced than we. He knows I'm writing this, and we are both waiting anxiously to see your answer. Would you, as a special favor, answer as soon as possible? Things are going so badly with us, and it means so much. Won't you please help? Is she right or are we?

FRANCES."

Who's right? Life is right. Life that makes Jimmie want to have a home and a family when he has become a man. And the mother, any mother—who tries to keep her boy from going on with life is 100 per cent wrong.

Jimmie does owe his mother love and respect and consideration. But he doesn't owe her his life. And he has no more right to sacrifice his life for her than he has to cut his throat. And if mamma had any real affection for him she wouldn't let him do it.

But she says she loves him too much to let him go," wails Frances. Sure she does. They all say that. But that isn't the reason she doesn't want him to go.

The reason she doesn't want Sonny to leave her is because she's too lazy and cowardly to live life for herself. Long ago she began centering all her attentions on him. She dropped all other interests and refused to think of anything but herson. She thought this was the way a mother should act. She thought it was a beautiful thing to do. But it wasn't. It was a lazy and wicked thing to do. It was her duty to live her own life and to train her children to live their lives. It was her duty to have other interests outside her home. And when she refused to obey that duty she narrowed her life until it became a sickly, withered thing—

And now she's trying to make Sonny pay for her grave mistake. She is trying to make him a substitute for all those other interests which she should have but which she, long ago, passed up.

Must Tell Mother

That's the truth about Sonny's mother. It is the pitiful truth about thousands of mothers and it works tragedy in countless homes.

What must Jimmy do?

He must tell her, with all the kindness—and all the firmness that he can muster — that he has his own life to live and a right to live it—that he is not going away from her unless, by her own actions, she compels him to . . . but that he is entitled to his wife and his own home . . . and if she'll let you, you'll both love her more, not less, but that if she keeps on as she is doing now she'll be driving both of you away.

He must make her understand that it isn't a case of you "coming between" him and her . . . but a case of her coming between the son she claims to love and his right to life and happiness. That's what Jimmie must do. But take a tip from a friend, Frances—

Don't force him to do it. For unless Jimmie sees for himself that this is the right thing to do—and unless he proceeds of his own accord to do it—neither you nor I can help him. And anything you may force him to do against his heart and will will make him hate you in the days to come.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Thursday, March 12

A day of progress and sound achievement is forecast from the ruling solar as well as lunar aspects. It is a time for well-directed energy and practical attack of new projects, especially those in association with large corporations, mergers or secret bodies or by means of strategy or diplomacy.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of sound progress. It is a time for definite action, with personal popularity and recognition of merit contributing to successful achievement.

A child born on this day may be splendidly endowed for staunch success in life, especially advancing in those lines requiring tact, diplomacy and cleverness. Its personal graces and abilities should assist in its happy career.

ORDER AND SYSTEM HAVE A GREAT DEAL TO DO WITH HEALTH AND HAPPINESS

By FAY KING

Even if we never make a trip as far as the next town, we are all travelers, making life's great journey—from the cradle to the grave.

Experienced travelers always travel light. They pack neatly, eliminating unnecessary things.

One such traveler advised making three bundles. One of the things you actually need. One of what you might need, and one of the things you would like to take. Then he advised discarding the last two and reducing the first to half.

A good deal of ill health and bad temper is due to disorder and lack of system.

Put your house and affairs in order. You will feel a hundred per cent better.

System in one's surroundings has its effect on one's system.

Madge, With Dicky's Aid, Scores Again Over Edith

I think Edith Fairfax would have given much to recall her question concerning the flowers Dicky had sent me for my sand-colored gown. She is not a slow-witted girl and she could not help but see the involuntary grateful glance I sent Dicky when he so summarily interrupted the baiting to which Edith was subjecting me. She must have realized in that instant that she was in for something unpleasant, but it was too late for her to draw back, and Dicky's answer to her question was prompt.

"Of course, I sent her flowers for her sand-colored gown," he said gaily. "But you see, I didn't realize when I did it how hipped old Phil Veritzen is on these decorations tonight. I've heard of his fussiness before—he's always sending flowers for his friends' entertainments, but when he does, he's the arbiter of elegance, all right; won't stand for the slightest deviation from his scheme. And he's spent a lot of time and money on his effect tonight, I guess. At any rate, one woman out of the picture, and that woman the hostess, would probably give him a stroke or something. Of course, this patient Griselda of mine"—he blew me a kiss as he spoke—"was willing to crab the game for me when I telephoned about sending her up a bouquet, but when I came to, I realized I couldn't let her do anything of the sort. So she's going to wear Veritzen's flowers with all the rest of you."

Edith's eyes were venomous, but her lips forced a smile.

"I've got to slip it to you, Madge, for getting the cake and credit, too. Who else could tell her husband she was going to wear sand color, and another man she was going to wear green, and trust to fate and her own shrewdness to work the problem out. Come, old girl, 'fess us. Did you have any idea which flowers you were going to wear?"

I saw the startled look Dicky shot at me, knew that Edith had touched a string which already was vibrating in his mind. But my answer was prompt, and I gave Dicky a confidential little smile which I knew was the traditional gall and wormwood to Edith.

"You'll have to ask Dicky that question, Ede. He knows the answer and if he wants to confide it to anybody else, it's his privilege."

"But I don't," Dicky answered promptly, smiling broadly, and I knew that I had pleased him. "But I do want something, and that is for you to get into your evening gown. 'At a girl, Mary!'" as his niece came in from her bedroom—a vision in the shaded tulle from palest yellow to deepest orange which I had bought for her. "You're ready at least."

"All but my flowers," Mary said, lifting her hand and displaying the exquisite orchids with their gold and brown markings against the cream. "I wanted you to tell me where to put them, Auntie Madge."

"Just as soon as I get into my own gown, dearest, which won't be two minutes. I'm all ready except for slipping it on. Excuse me, Edith, won't you?"

Edith nodded, but I saw that she was watching Dicky narrowly. His eyes were sparkling with the zest of appreciation which is his for an artistic triumph.

"That old boy sure knows his onions," he said. "Those are perfect with that gown, Mary. Show us yours, Ede."

I did not hear her answer, for I was in my own room, hurriedly unfastening the dress I had worn down to the dining room. Mary came in a second later and deftly put my evening gown over my head. As she pulled it into place, she whispered ecstatically:

"Oh! but isn't she sore, though?" That's one of her little schemes which didn't go through. She's trying to laugh it off and be sweet to Uncle Dicky, but she won't get over that left to the face in a hurry."

I suppose I should have reproved her, but her ardent young sympathy was very sweet to me, and though I shook my head at her, I patted her cheek lovingly, and then, taking her bouquet, I pinned it on her bodice for her.

"Thank you, that's perfect," she said. "Now what about your flowers?"

Alas! for the resolution which I had formed to minimize the size and beauty of the bouquet of rare white orchids which Mr. Veritzen had sent to me. Edith's covert sneers were still with me, and I took out the exquisite cluster of flowers and fastened it against my left shoulder. Then from the bouquet which Dicky had sent me, I took three of the exquisitively tinted rosebuds and fastened them with a tendril of green, in the girdle of my gown, remembering Dicky's loving gibe "just against your heart." Then feeling armed for anything Edith Fairfax could do or say, I slipped my hand in Mary's arm and went back to the living room.

Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

If you would have fingernails in prime condition, don't let the manicurist cut off the cuticle at the nail base. By oil applications, soaking with castile suds and lifting up with the orange wood stick the cuticle will not cling, nor will hangnails form. Lanoline, olive oil or vaseline are good cuticle cosmetics though there are special proprietary preparations that are highly recommended.

No toothbrush should be of firm, heavy, unyielding bristles that injure the gums. The new toothbrush should stand in cold salt water for half an hour before being used. Place the brush on the gums, sweep down over the teeth with a rolling motion so that a portion of the bristles will scurry between the teeth where foreign substances lodge to invite invading bacteria. The most important brushing is at bedtime.

There were those who predicted that the bob which came suddenly from nowhere would as suddenly evaporate. As forecasters they are—failures. The short bob has become an institution. Some women will never grow hair, if they live a hundred years longer. Fashions are as they should be, you can shear or be shoulder length or cultivate old-fashioned pigtail material. You take your choice, and you pay no money at all.

Household Hints

When you have just a small amount of cheese to grate, try pressing it through a small strainer with the thumb instead of grating it. It is much easier on the fingers.

If you have gotten the cake batter too stiff, don't thin it out with milk; it will toughen it. Beat an egg up light and add it gradually to the batter until the correct thickness is reached.

If the fish you are frying seems to splatter a great deal, invert the colander over the pan. This will prevent splashing and perhaps a nasty burn and yet the small holes will allow the steam to escape.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

The Value of Liver in Treating Anemia

Not very long ago we could buy liver in any butcher shop for as low as 2c cents a pound. Nowadays you will be lucky if you get it for twice or three times that price.

Just what caused such a big increase in the price of this food? It used to be difficult for the butcher to dispose of this meat and it was the favorite food for animal pets due to its cheapness.

Dr. Copeland

About 10 years ago a novel discovery was published in the medical journals. It was announced that a liver diet is of great assistance in correcting anemic conditions.

Its value in cases of pernicious anemia was outlined. This was significant because heretofore very little by way of treatment could be offered to patients with this disease. Experience has shown that the giving of liver to patients with pernicious anemia has been useful beyond the expectations of the early research workers studying this problem.

In anemia, particularly in what the doctors call pernicious anemia, there is a marked decrease in the number of red cells in the blood. In cases where the red blood cells have been very low in number, they have been multiplied by four or five after the feeding of a diet rich in liver or liver extracts. In many instances, this remarkable change has been brought about within a period of from one to three months.

There have been changes, too, beyond what the blood tests have shown. Not only does the feeding of liver tend to increase the number of red blood cells, but there is a marked change in the general health of the individual. Decided improvement is noted.

The continued use of liver in the diet soon becomes tiresome and even intolerable. On this account, the use of liver extracts has come into vogue. However, it is important to remember that only the extract recommended by your physician is the one to be used in your case if you are afflicted.

Sometimes we become unduly excited over what appears to be an important discovery. But there can be no doubt of the marked advantage in the use of liver as one of the means for dealing with pernicious anemia. The great decrease in the death rate in this disease is shown by the figures of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

Liver, especially calf's liver, can be added with advantage to the diet of all individuals. One need not necessarily have anemia to derive benefit from this simple and nutritious food.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

The Sequence of Silver Service.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Why does a young girl or a young matron remove her right hand glove when entering a house?

2. When there are two knives of the same size on the table, what does one use the first knife for?

3. Does one put both hands in the finger-bowl at once?

4. What does one do with an individual serving spoon?

R. W.

1. Your question is not very clear . . . . . sometimes she does not. It depends on what kind of a party she is attending. If, for instance, the party is informal, she would remove her gloves. But, if she is attending a formal reception, she would probably keep her gloves on.

2. This depends on the menu. The second knife may be for a fish course, for an entree, or the first knife may be for the main course and the second one for the salad course. The point is that the knives are used in sequence—that is, we start with the silver piece farthest from the plate and proceed toward the plate.

3. No. The tips of the fingers of one hand are slightly dipped into the water in the finger bowl, and the tips of the fingers of the other hand are put in the water.

4. One serves oneself to whatever food is in the dish with which the spoon is placed. As a general custom, it is preferable to place both a serving spoon and a serving fork when the serving dish is passed.

Ladies Always First in Introduction.

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

1. When attending a supper dance, with a party of 12 people, and you see a couple who are very good friends of yours and you ask them to join your party of 12, of which you are the hostess, how should you introduce them? Is it correct to skip from one girl to another, introducing the girls first and leaving the young men until last, or is it possible to introduce first a boy and then a girl, just as they are seated at the table?

2. At an informal home gathering when the last couple arrive and are strange to the people already present, will your answer apply also?

READER.

1. You should first introduce the women to each other, then the men to the women, and then the men to the men. All the introductions that have to do with the women should be accomplished first, even if this seems a bit awkward.

2. Yes.

Don't Forget Your Stockings

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I expect to attend a formal affair in the near future, and I would like to know if it would be proper to attend stockingless? If not, what shade of stockings should I wear with a white moire evening dress and white brocaded slippers?

2. What jewelry would be suitable with this outfit?

THANK YOU.

1. Wear stockings that are as near flesh color as you can get. Do not go stockingless.

2. Jewelry that is of a formal nature, consistent with your formal attire.

Penn. Mother Solves Problem

"My little daughter, Marie, caused me many anxious moments," says Mrs. Michael Mobile, 539 N. Edgewood St., Philadelphia. "She was listless, didn't want to play and had very little appetite.

"She suffered a lot from constipation until I heard about California Fig Syrup and decided to give her some. Fig Syrup helped Marie remarkably. She is now strong, has no trouble with her bowels, has a good appetite and digestion, is quite the picture of health as you can see."

For over 50 years, California Fig Syrup has been helping bilious, headachy, weak, constipated babies and children. Doctors by thousands recommend this pure vegetable product. Children love its flavor. It acts gently to open the bowels in colds or children's diseases. It cleanses a child's system harmlessly and in a hurry. Bowels become regular with its use and remain so, because they are toned and strengthened by this wonderful combination of pure fig syrup and elixir of senna.

Look for the name California when buying. That marks the genuine.

GRANT HAS GOOD CHANCE TO SUCCEED

JUST BECAUSE HE was dropped by a couple of American League clubs, it doesn't necessarily follow that George Grant can't be made into a winning pitcher for the Pirates. Several other hurlers who were given the gate in the junior major circuit later came through in fine style in the National loop, so there is a chance that the big right-hander whom the Bucs drafted from Rochester in the International League, and whom Manager Jewel Ens has decided to retain for the start of the pennant season, may succeed in doing the same thing.

George Grant

Indeed, the Rovers have on their own staff right now a couple of American League discards who are admittedly pretty fair pitchers. One is Ervin Brame, let go by the Athletics in 1925, and the other is Heinie Meine, once dropped after a brief tryout with the Browns. And they are only two on a rather lengthy list of exhibits demonstrating that American League release is no indication that a pitcher lacks the stuff to make good in a later test in the big show, such as Grant is now undergoing.

DAZZY VANCE was turned back by the Yankees in both 1915 and 1916. Burleigh Grimes was returned to the sticks by the Tigers in 1913. Bob Smith, though he was then an infielder and had not yet turned pitcher, was cast off by the Senators in 1921.

The Browns could see no future for Charley Root and canned him following tryouts in 1911 and 1912. The same club in 1921 declined to keep Jumbo Elliott. The Tigers discarded Clarence Mitchell in 1911 and again in 1912, Jess Haines in 1915 and 1916, and adjudged Sylvester Johnson done in 1925. And Cleveland in 1924 released William Watson Clark.

YOU COULD CONSTRUCT a pretty fair pitching staff of those American League cast-offs, so there is a chance that Grant may prove worth while as a Pirate, even though he has been rejected by both the Browns and the Indians. He is 28 years old, but in modern baseball a lot of first-class fingers, such as Remy Kremer and Ervin Brame, fail to get fairly started in the fast set until they are near that age.

Grant's record in the International League last year was not a sensational one, as he lost 14 games against 11 victories, but that was due largely to the fact that 29 of his 39 contests were pitched for the comparatively weak Jersey City club before he was shifted to Rochester. He looks like a pretty good pitcher, on the whole, according to reports, one at least worthy of a thorough trial.

THE MEETING OF the University of Pittsburgh and Duquesne University boxing teams in the Duke gym next Saturday night will not only be the initial intercollegiate competition for both glove squads, but it will mark the beginning of a new era as being the first time that the Dukes have ever had a chance to measure strength in any branch of sports with either of the other big local schools, Pitt or Carnegie Tech. It will signal the arrival of the Bluff boys "up there" at last in local big time, the beginning of Pittsburgh's "Big Three," and the starting point of what will eventually be three-cornered competition here in all lines of college athletics. A football game with Pitt and two basketball contests with the Tartans are on the Dukes' books for 1932, and the rest will come in due time.

Johnny Gooch

THOUGH JOHNNY GOOCH announced his retirement and refused to report to the Baltimore International League club, with the result that Commissioner K. M. Landis set aside the deal in which the Reds had traded the catcher to the Orioles for Dundee Rodgers, Stowe-Rocks outfielder, it is unlikely that Gooch really means to quit baseball.

While in Pittsburgh recently, Johnny told friends that the transfer to Baltimore had disappointed him, as it was his ambition to become a minor league manager and possibly, in time, a major league pilot. One prospective managerial chance in the South had blown up, but Gooch figured he would be able to find another if he had his freedom.

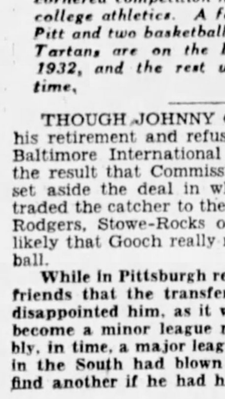
THE VETERAN BACKSTOP now goes back on the reserve list of the Cincinnati club and may ask the Red bosses to make another deal that will send him to a minor league town where he will have a chance to become manager.

In refusing to join the Orioles, Gooch opens the way for another former Pirate, Johnny O'Connell, of Verona, to become Baltimore's first catcher for this season.

IT IS A LOFTY tribute to the kind of men turned out and the quality of football played at the University of Pittsburgh that the University of Pennsylvania should select from among all the available timber in the country a former Panther star as its new gridiron coach at a time when the sweeping athletic "reforms" at the Philadelphia institution called for greater care in the choice of a mentor than ever before in history. It is a distinct honor that comes to Harvey Harman and his alma mater in the appointment of the former Blue and Gold tackle to what is considered the toughest spot in football right now. Penn had scoured the nation for the right man, and Harman was chosen because of what he stands for as well as for his unquestionable coaching ability.

THOUGH THE APPOINTMENT came rather as a surprise just a few hours after it was announced that the possibilities had narrowed down to Bill Roper, Si Pauxtis and Bill Wood, football fans throughout this section are a unit in the opinion that Penn has made a splendid choice. Harman knows football from A to Z and his success during eight years of coaching at Haverford and one year at Sewanee has shown that he also knows how to teach it.

Harvey, the son of the late Rev. H. E. Harman, of the East End, entered Pitt in 1918 after preparing at New Castle and Peabody high schools. He won his football letter as a Panther in 1918, 1919, 1920 and 1921, and a track letter in 1920. Some of Pitt's football immortals were his teammates on the gridiron here, including Tom Davies, George McLaren, Andy Hastings, Jimmy DeHart, Tommy Holleran, Herb Stein, Jack Sack, Harry Seidelson, Tiny Hewitt and others.



Gene Tunney

ONE OF THE first things a ring fighter must learn is never to show pain or distress. He must hide it with a smile or a poker face and keep the other fellow from knowing that he has been hurt.

Sometimes a little blood gives the opposite impression. A boxer may not be hurt severely, and may be as strong and as fresh as his opponent, but a slight cut may bleed freely and cause a smear to make it look as though the principal were being beaten badly.

TO KEEP HIMSELF from looking that way to his opponent, the officials and the spectators, Gene Tunney resorted to desperate measures in his first fight with the late Harry Greb in New York in 1922, the bout in which the Pittsburgher wrested from him the American light-heavyweight championship. The story has just been related by the veteran referee, Kid McPartland. "Tunney sold himself to me that first fight with Greb," McPartland says. "Gene swallowed the blood from his cut lip in a desperate effort to keep himself looking as presentable as possible. I had an idea that night that he would win the world heavyweight championship one day. It is difficult for a fellow so game and determined to miss getting somewhere."

PASO ROBLES, Cal., March 11.—Larry French, stubborn holdout pitcher of the Pirates, may be signed and safely in the fold before the day is over. The aggressive young southpaw, who is reported seeking a salary increase of more than 100 per cent, is due in Paso Robles some time today, according to a message received by Manager Ens. The pilot of the club will be in authority in a conference slated immediately after the arrival, and in the event that French listens to some sort of a compromise agreed upon by Owner Dreyfuss and Manager Ens, he will be tendered a contract.

French will come in from Oregon, his present home. Larry has been assisting in the operation of a small resort hotel and probably is in such health that he could be in shape to pitch in two or three weeks.

MAY GET $9,000

It is likely the lefthander has paid some heed to the ultimatum recently issued by Owner Dreyfuss regarding the pitcher's stand. If French is demanding his salary be doubled, he is as wrong as a left-handed shortstop, in the opinion of many of his mates, and that is just about the furtherest south in being wrong.

Larry, it is reported reliably, received a sum somewhere in the vicinity of $6,000 or $7,000 for his last year's efforts. The feeling here is he is asking for at least $13,000. It would be safe in saying when he does affix his signature it will be around $9,000.

The lefthander is one of the hardest workers in the league, and in his willingness he has made plenty of friends, but these same boosters feel that if it be true Larry asked $13,000, he did it with intention of meeting his bosses somewhere near the middle or neutral zone.

French won 17 and lost 18 games last season. He and Remy Kremer deadlocked for the honor pitching the most innings in the National League. At times, Larry looked like one of the best southpaws in the sport, but there were intervals when he was just an ordinary "thrower," a designation far removed from the pitching category.

You can lay a wager that French will sign soon after he BILOXI, Miss., March 11.—The training season is proceeding true to form. I see the Cards won the little world series from the A's, but that is just five months too late to cure the acidosis of those St. Louis fans. Everything is all cockeyed in the spring. The Braves always thump the Brooklyns and look like a block of gold debentures, and the Yankees play like the Oswego married men's team.

Out in California, Hornsby put his Cubs against a team of movie comedians from Hollywood. That's what you call strategy. Hornsby was giving his club a dose of preventive, so they won't bust right out laughing when they meet the Phils in a league game.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: MRS. BELLE RYANS HAS SMOKED A PIPE FOR 109 YEARS—Mrs. Ryans, born in Tennessee, March 4, 1811, has been a devotee of a pipe since she was 11 years old. Although she has used tobacco continuously for 109 years, she does not approve of the modern girl smoking cigarets. In a recent statement to the press she expressed only one unfulfilled desire in life and that was to ride in an airplane. This has been denied her because of her age. Mrs. Ryans is now living in Savannah, Ga. ONE LOCOMOTIVE ATOP THE OTHER IN A HEAD-ON COLLISION—This collision, which took place on one of the large railroads in Massachusetts more than a score of years ago, is unique in the annals of railroading. The engine shown mounted on the other was pushing a snowplow at the time of the collision, and, as a result of the terrific impact, it climbed over the plow and landed on top of the heavier locomotive.

GROVERS BEAT DUKES, 37-27

GROVE CITY, Pa., March 11.—Grove City's passers, running wild in the first half, piled up a lead that carried them through a hectic second half to defeat Duquesne, 37 to 27, here last night. Stephens led a drive to give the Dukes all the honors of a furious second half. The Grovers' lead of 30-13 at the half was sufficient, and they held a safe margin in the closing minutes. The game was the season's final one for Duquesne.

In the second half Duquesne scored nine points in five minutes, while the Grovers were given not even a free throw. Stephens conducted the rally with a great exhibition. With their lead cut to seven points, the locals came to life. The lineup:

Grove City—37.		Duquesne—27.
Fegley	F	Benedict
Montgomery	F	Abele
Burke	C	McGeever
Laycock	GG	Stephens
Koma	G	Parry

Substitutions—Grove City, Stavnitsky, Minnick, Ruckle; Duquesne, Irwin, Wilder, Pawlina.
Field goals—Grove City, Fegley 2, Montgomery, Minnick 2, Laycock 2, Stavnitsky 3, Koma 2; Duquesne, Irwin 3, Stephens 2, Wilder.
Fouls—Fegley, 6 out of 7; Minnick, 3 out of 6; Burke, 1 out of 1; Stavnitsky, 2 out of 2; Koma, 1 out of 2; Benedict, 3 out of 4; Abele, 2 out of 2; Irwin, 3 out of 4; McGeever, 3 out of 4; Stephens, 1 out of 2; Wilder, 2 out of 3; Parry, 1 out of 3.

GENEVA TOPS W. & J.

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., March 11.—Geneva College topped off the 1931 basketball season here last night, defeating Wash-Jeff, 35 to 20, after a slow first half which ended 10-7 in favor of the Covenanters. In the second half Geneva's offense got to moving and the Presidents were completely outclassed.

In the preliminary the Geneva Reserves defeated the Kosmos, of Beaver Falls, 17-14. The varsity lineup:

∵ Rookie Tales ∵

NO. 3—CARL SEVER.

PASO ROBLES, Cal., March 11.—The youngest member of the big Pirate squad in camp here is Carl (Cal) Sever, who at the tender age of 17 is able to do some things around the hot corner that would excite envy in stars of that position.

Cal, with Dutch Geissberger, his inseparable chum in camp, was brought South from home by Joe Devine, the well known scout, who seldom misses fire when he yanks a lad into the Buccaneer camp.

Carl Sever

Sever had just graduated from St. Ignatius High School in San Francisco when Scout Joe nailed him, but even before this he was learning the A. B. C.'s of baseball in a noted school.

Golden Gate Park, in the big city north of here, is the meeting place of hundreds of kids from the age of 12 to manhood. The park is dotted with baseball diamonds and each Saturday and Sunday the kids make the welkin ring. The fact that the lads cannot afford uniforms caused somebody long ago to designate the players as "Park Bums." The name doesn't fit, yet it sticks and the graduates all get a laugh out of it. The reason the name is not altogether appropriate is seen in the fact that that most of the boys who have gone through the "Park Bum" school are young men with an ideal.

After a boy reaches the age of 15 he tries to get on one of the clubs that play for a stake. Each player puts in 60 cents and if his club wins he gets 80 cents in return. The 20 cents represent the net profit. The other 40 go for baseball, bats, the cost of umpires, etc.

Judging from what Carl has shown at Paso Robles, his days of playing for a 60-cent loss or a 20-cent gain are about over. His extreme youth precludes any major league berth this year, but there are many veterans in camp who think the smooth rookie could hold his own in a Class A League without any further experience. And, if Jewel Ens can find a place for Carl, he will be farmed out on the end of a Pittsburgh string.—CHARLES J. DOYLE.

UZCUDUN TRIUMPHS

MATCH BROWN, BALDOCK

LONDON, March 11.—(AP.)—Panama Al Brown, bantamweight champion, has been signed to meet Teddy Baldock, British boxing idol, at the National Sporting Club. No date has been set.

PENN SIGNS HARMAN

PHILADELPHIA, March 11.—(AP.)—Harvey Harman, head coach last season at the University of the South, has been selected as football coach by the University of Pennsylvania. He succeeds J. R. Ludlow Wray.

Harvey Harman

Harman is a protege of Glenn Warner. He was graduated from the University of Pittsburgh and later received a master's degree in political science at Pennsylvania. He was a star lineman on the Pittsburgh gridiron team.

The new Penn gridiron mentor began his coaching career at the age of 21 at Haverford College, remaining there for eight years. He resigned from Haverford last year to accept a three-year contract at the University of the South.

FORMER PITT STAR

Harvey Harman, the new Penn football coach, is the son of the late Rev. H. E. Harman, of the East End. His mother also is dead. A brother, the Rev. J. P. Harman, is pastor of Bethany Lutheran Church, of Braddock, which charge he has had for eight years. A sister, Caroline, is attending a school in Philadelphia.

Harman was a stalwart tackle at the University of Pittsburgh during the regime of Pop Warner. He was born in New Castle, Pa., and later attended Peabody High School here, entering Pitt at the age of 17 in 1918. In 1922, shortly after being graduated, he married Miss E. Eakins, of New Castle, who was graduated from Pitt in the same year. They make their home outside Philadelphia.

W. P. I. A. L. SERIES SECOND ROUND ENDS

The Lineup

Duquesne		McDonald
Servick	F	Russell
Zeranik	F	Rondoni
Karpowich	C	Knepshield
Durik	G	Malarkey
Alexandrovich	G	Tournshene

Referee—Sgt. Beggs Snyder. Umpire—Dan Daugherty.

The second round competition of the W. P. I. A. L.'s annual championship elimination tournament, which is rapidly becoming not only an elimination of teams, but the elimination of nervous systems of those who attend the tussles, comes to an end tonight as Duquesne and McDonald meet in the Pitt Stadium. The winner (winnah to you) will battle New Castle in a lower bracket semi-final contest Saturday night.

McDonald came through the first round with a 21-18 victory over Washington in one of the two extra-period games put on to date. Duquesne walloped Bentleyville unmercifully, being the most impressive of first round victors.

Despite the clever showing of McDonald in winning over Washington, Duquesne is the favorite tonight. It is the contention of coaches and close students of the teams that the Dukes possess too much speed and size for McDonald, despite the presence in the lineup of a brace of sterling performers in Knepshield, a center, and Leo Malarkey, a right-niftylooking guard.

McDonald hurt its own cause with those who might have been inclined to clamber on the team's bandwagon by entering the Washington County tournament, competing in that event over the week end, the inference being that the Section Fourteeners may have burned themselves out.

Easy for Scott

Scott High, of North Braddock, recorded its second walkaway triumph of the tournament in the Stadium last night, crushing Scottdale in a second-round game by the one-sided count of 32 to 11. In doing so, Scott limited Scottdale to two lone field goals.

The North Braddock entry, coached, you know, by Johnny Reed, flashed altogether too much speed and class for Scottdale. At the end of the first quarter Scott led by 15 to 0. The score at the end of the half favored the Section VIII stars by 23 to 2.

Scottdale did slightly better in the third quarter, gathering together five points on a field goal, its first of the game, by Stauffer, and three fouls by the same lad. Scott scored thrice, on Johnny Tomko's field goal and Krutillis' foul.

EICHER STOPPED

In the final quarter, with its lineup generally disarranged, Scott counted three more buckets from the court while Scottdale added one, a goal by the lad who was touted to star, Forward Eicher, and another foul by Stauffer.

Krutullis, with four field goals,

Pittsburgh's hopes of getting into the International League hockey championship play-offs went soaring last night when the Yellow Jackets whitewashed the Cleveland Indians, 1-0 at Duquesne Garden, were dealt a staggering blow today when it was announced that Gordy Fraser, the mainstay in the local defense, would be lost to the team for the remainder of the season.

Fraser was slashed on the hand by a Cleveland player in last night's fight. Despite great pain he finished the fray. When Fraser requested treatment by the club physician today it was found that his hand was broken.

SECOND FRACTURE

This is the second time this season that the "Iron Man" of the Pittsburgh backfield has sustained a fractured hand. He performed in many games with his ...oled hand heavily taped. The ...ure sustained last night is of a serious nature that he will be able to play again until season, according to Roy D. Schooley, president and manager of the Jackets.

With Fraser out of the lineup, the Jackets chances of getting into the title series are rather forlorn. They pulled up to within a half-game of the fourth-place London Tecumsehs by winning last night while London was being held to an 0-0 tie by Windsor. The Jackets may win in Detroit tomorrow and they may down Syracuse here Saturday, but without Fraser they are not likely to win in London next Tuesday or against Buffalo here a week from Friday.

Fraser is the best defense man in the International loop and his loss is the most painful blow that the Jackets could have sustained at this time.

WHITE, FIELDS STAR

Tex White and Whitey Fields who teamed up to engineer the Pittsburgh goal, and Gordy Fraser, Leo Reise and Albie Cox, defense aces, were the gentlemen who played hero roles in the Jackets' victory drama last night. The lone tally of the fierce fight was slammed home by White after 15 minutes and 37 seconds of battling in the first period. Fields carried the disc into scoring territory, and as he ploughed into the Indian defense, he slipped the puck into the unobstructed right lane, down which Tex, unaccompanied, sped toward the Cleveland net. White took about two swift strokes to get into position for his shot, a close-in hot one that left Alex Wood, Indian goalie, bewildered and beaten.

Passes by Fields have paved the way for the only three goals that the Jackets have registered in their last two fights, and White has been on the scoring end of two of 'em.

Until their tally was "on ice," the Jackets carried the fight to the Indians, but as soon as the locals had gained the lead they fell back on the defensive and permitted the visitors to do most of the attacking.

The game marked the conclusion of the Pittsburgh-Cleveland season series, which Cleveland won with four wins, two ties and two defeats. The lineup.

BOBBY JONES' Lessons in Golf

By BOBBY JONES

American, Open, British Open, American Amateur and British Amateur Champion.

If it is fair for me to draw a general conclusion from my own limited contact with the golfing fraternity, one of the questions which agitates them now has to do with the kind of clubs they will require for play with the new ball. Most of the golfers I met around Chicago had played practically no golf since the first of the year, when the new ball became official, and hence had had no opportunity to test the ball for themselves. They have heard though that with it the chief trouble will be to keep it down rather than to get it up and they are wondering if this fact ought to influence them in the selection of implements of the game.

Bobby Jones

I think it is possible to give definite assurance that no radical changes in clubs will be made necessary although I believe that attention should be given to some features of design. Throughout the past several years there has been a continuing tendency in one direction which I believe will continue and possibly be given some impetus by the change in the ball.

For some time the better players have definitely favored deeper faces on both wood and iron clubs because the powerful hitters found that even with the old ball their problem was to flatten the trajectory of the shot, especially when they were likely to have to play in a wind. But when the heavier ball was in use those players who were not able to hit so hard nor so accurately as the best pros found that their problem was the reverse of this and that they needed some assistance in getting the ball up. Consequently the clubs particularly woods which were designed for the expert were not exactly suitable for the less able player.

NEW BALL EASY TO LOFT

Of course, the whole thing still remains a relative matter. It is not possible that with the new ball, the clubs formerly used by the expert will be suitable for everyone. But I think that the change will make them suitable for a much greater number than before. Because of the greater ease with which the ball will be elevated each class of player on down the line will be able to stand just a little more depth and probably profit from it.

I even have in mind that a club which I designed for myself back in 1924 may now suit me perfectly. I think that a large head on a driver gives the player a feeling of confidence. It makes the ball look small, and makes him feel that his club has enough behind it. So this driver, which I had made had a head so large that it could carry only a small plug of lead and remain under 14 ounces. The face was quite deep with practically no loft. I used it quite a lot around Atlanta and especially in the Georgia-Alabama open. P. G. A. tournament at Druid Hills I did some of the best driving of my life.

But I soon found that although the club worked all right when I was hitting the ball well, if my swing ever got the least bit off, I would begin to smother a lot of shots. This was one of the reasons that I ran into grief in the national open championship of 1924 at Oakland Hills and had to change drivers during the tournament.

DEEP FACES POPULAR

I think that deeper faces on all the iron clubs, down to the No. 5 or 6, will be found to be quite popular. The pitching clubs now are deep enough, and will not need to be changed. Another thing which will make it easier to keep the new ball down will be the increased thickness of the irons towards the top of the blade. This also is a feature which had already begun to be popularized before the new ball made its appearance.

It seems to me also that clubs like the driving-mashie and mashie-iron ought to be more useful than ever before. These two clubs always have been particular pets of mine, although, in my bag, they have been emergency clubs more than regulars. My driving-mashie is a club of about the same loft as a No. 1 iron, but with a decidedly deeper and shorter blade. I use it only when I want a long, low boring shot into the wind. I don't need it very often, but when I do, I need it badly. The mashie-iron, within its limits, I employ the same way. Its loft is approximately between that of the No. 3 and the No. 2 iron. I use it either to its full range, or slightly modified, to take the place of the No. 3 and No. 4 into the wind.

Seeking their nineteenth victory in the next-to-the-final combat of a 24-game card, the University of Pittsburgh's Golden Panthers battle West Virginia in Morgantown tonight, the game being the second of the year between Pitt and West Virginia and the finale for the latter.

A victory tonight and another Saturday in the final game of the campaign, with Penn State, will give the Panthers a percentage of .833 for the season and a record of eight victories and no defeats for competition in this district.

Pitt has compiled an enviable record for the year, winning, so far, six out of seven games from Eastern opponents, six out of nine from Middle Western foes and six from district rivals. Western Reserve, Indiana, College of the City of New York and Creighton were the only teams to down the locals.

The Mountaineers were defeated, 17-15, in a game here in the Stadium earlier in the season. Since then Pitt has been beaten once by City College, while West Virginia has lost to West Virginia Wesleyan, Temple, Penn State, Army and Carnegie Tech.

The game, scheduled to get under way at 9 o'clock, will cap a fine three-event program. At 6:30 the freshmen quintets will play and at 7:45 the Bucknell and Mountaineer varsity boxing teams will exchange wallops.

FRENCH MAY SIGN TODAY

confers with Manager Ens. Perhaps he will put it off, but Larry, like Dick Bartell, loves the game, and you know what happened to Richard the Lionhearted, a year ago when he appeared in the ball orchard. Dick weakened and he put his moniker on the contract for a lot less than the $10,000 he sought.

REGS PLAY YANS

The feeling here is that French should get in line and then make another attempt at a big season. If he is successful, he could consistently ask for another substantial raise. He has been in the majors only two years, and he still is a kid, these facts making his position a bit untenable in the eyes of the veterans.

The two Pirate squads will meet head-on this afternoon in the third camp battle of the season. The Regulars came from behind to win over the Hooligans yesterday. The score was 8 to 7.

The second straight victory for the first team brought more loose fielding, errors being plentiful. The youngsters are so anxious to take the measure of their superiors, they are nervous in their actions.

Jimmy Dempsey, Verona boy, in left field for the Hooligans, came through with a fine three-bagger that produced two runs.

Manager Ens used Harry Geissberger and Carl Sever as substitutes for George Grantham and Capt. Traynor in the regular lineup. Traynor's arm is not as strong as it will be, and Grantham has a slightly wrenched ankle.

Gus Suhr spoiled a victory party for the kids in the seventh when he crashed a triple to left center with the bases loaded and three needed to tie. Mosolf then drove in Gus with the winning run.

The regular morning practice is scheduled for this morning.

STEVE SMITH TO RETURN FOR BOUTS

By HARRY KECK

Sports Editor.

Steve Smith, the "iron man" featherweight, who jumped into the breach as a substitute for Jackie Rodgers against Johnny Datto, the Filipino, at Motor Square Garden Monday night and upset the dope by pounding out a decisive victory, will cut himself a piece of cake as a result of his good night's work.

Steve Smith

In addition to dragging down a fair wage for his labors against Datto, the veteran now has a return engagement in the making here, as he went over in big style with the cash customers. Whether he will be brought back for Datto or will be sent against Rodgers first is a problem agitating some thought waves in the noble dome of Jules (Julius) Beck, the Motor Square matchmaker.

DATTO OUT OF LUCK

While Smith found the pinch-hitting role a lucrative one, Datto was feeling out of luck all of the way 'round following the battle. In the first place, he had been handed a trimming that cut deeply into the prestige he had built up for himself through two victories over Rodgers and he stood in a fair way of losing his championship match with Battling Battalino, the featherweight king, slated for Hartford, Conn., March 26. Battalino has accepted a non-title bout with Sammy Fuller in Boston next Tuesday. Fuller last week defeated Tony Canzoneri, the lightweight champion, in an overweight match in the Hub.

It was learned yesterday that Datto entered the ring with his right fist in a stoved condition. He did not use that hand in working out in the Garden gym on Sunday, but kept the injury under cover, figuring he could beat Smith as matters stood.

Between Rounds

Jim McGirr, of Mckeesport, who has been without a show all week and who is planning a Tiger Joe Randall-Jimmy Belmont windup for Thursday night of next week.

The Duquesne University boxing team makes its debut on its home gym floor today night in a dual meet with the Pittsburgh Athletic Association. Harry Dangherty is the coach of the Blue Dukes.

Promoter Appleby Meyers, of the Moose Temple, today completed his card for Friday night's show, signing Jack Siegel, Uniontown southpaw, to box Young Joe Walcott, Washington (Pa.) Negro welterweight, in the second bout of six rounds. Benny Schwartz, Baltimore, meets Jimmy Thomas, local Negro bantamweight, and Johnny Warner, of Clairton, against Mose Butch, of Oakland, in the two 10-round bouts making up a double windup. And Rose Fields, of Weirton (W. Va.) against Jackie Wilson, Homewood Negro flyweight, in the opener.

Harry Fine, of the Hill, will meet Eddie Kaufman, of Cleveland, in one of the preliminaries on the Eddie Brannon-Cowboy Eddie Anderson return bout card at Motor Square Garden next Monday night. Peaches Gallagher and Jimmy Reilly are paired for another battle.

Ray Eberle presents an amateur boxing show of eight bouts in the Ruffin Theater, Aliquippa, tonight. Mike Chomyak and Johnny Fargo, middleweights, are in the main bout.

The finals of the annual Golden Gloves tournament in the Chicago Stadium are carded for tonight. The winners will battle the New York champions for inter-city laurels.

West Virginia University's varsity boxing team meets Bucknell University at home tonight.

A team of amateur boxers from the Al Sands A. C., of Uniontown, will oppose one from the Robins A. C., of Cleveland, in an inter-city show at the Keystone A. C. Friday night of next week. The Pittsburgh Lyceum has an amateur card arranged for tomorrow night.

Youngstown, like Pittsburgh, is getting ready for a wrestling era. Promoter Al Zill, having arranged a show for Wednesday night of next week.

Charles (Kid) Curry, formerly of Atlantic City and Cleveland, now of New Castle, is in town ready for battles with any of the 122-126-pounders. He claims victories over Al Dundee, Battling Leonard, Jacinto Valdez, Al Law, Johnny Mosley, Georgie Mack, Steve Nugent and Tommy Murray, among others.

Gerula Jones boxes Buddy Gorman at Oakland, Cal., tonight.

Al Becker, local middleweight boxer, who announced his retirement from the ring following a recent knockout defeat, plans to take up wrestling and may appear in the preliminaries of forthcoming shows at Motor Square Garden. Muscle Scholes, stablemate of Becker, under the management of Abie Witz, also has decided to quit boxing, which accounts for the fact that he will not be on the Moose Temple card Friday night.

MANOS, SMITH REACH FINAL

Theos Manos, singles champion, and Frank Smith, of the K. A. C., defeated Tom Davies and Steve Meyers, Y. M. C. A., 21-20 and 21-16, and E. Curtis Clark and Al Bialas, P. A. A., tripped Dave Olbum and Goldstein, Y. M. H. A., 21-15 and 21-13, in the semi-final round of the city doubles handball championship tourney, played yesterday on the courts at the Keystone Athletic Club.

BUCKHANNON, W. Va., March 11. (AP.)—West Virginia Wesleyan's Bobcats were a bit ferocious in the first half of the basketball game here last night, but were domesticated by Bethany in the second half and bowed, 55-35.

SWISSVALE SIX COPS TITLE

Swissvale High's girls copped the Allegheny County championship yesterday by defeating McKees Rocks, 25-19, on the Fifth Avenue High court.

In the county schools tourney, Avalon's boys defeated Robinson, 24-18, while West View's girls upset Robinson, 11-9.

PIN TOURNEY UNDER WAY

The twenty-fourth annual Tri-State tenpin tournament was scheduled to get under way on the Forward alleys, Squirrel Hill, at 2 p. m. today, when six doubles pairs will roll the first frames of the competition that will continue through Saturday night. Today's schedule:

W. P. I. A. L. TEAMS CLASH

BELLEFIELDERS RALLY TO TRIP TUNNELITES

For the first time since 1927, Schenley High School's colors are fluttering from the City League basketball flagstaff, the Red and Black having been nailed there yesterday as Schenley defeated South Hills in the second and final game of the intersectional series for the city title. Schenley won, 25 to 20, before a good-sized turnout at the Pitt Stadium.

Last Friday, the Bellefielders walloped the Section II entry, 28 to 14, in the first game of the series. A second half attack provided the overwhelming margin of victory in that game, and yesterday, it was another fine second half splurge that enabled the Oaklanders to come from behind to win.

Schenley led by 6 to 3 at the end of the first quarter, but South Hills rallied to take an 11-to-9 advantage at the half. In the third period, the teams battled tooth and nail, to say nothing of an occasional heel, with the Bellefielders effecting a 16-all tie to start the final period.

South Hills jumped to the fore in the final period, when both Metz and Dering counted goals in rapid succession, but Crum, Joe Mihm, Landau and Cales banged away with telling effect to stow away the ball game.

Dering, with five field goals, was the high scorer. Schmidt dropped in four for Schenley.

The City League, which is Section VIII of the P. I. A. A., does not have to compete in the W. P. I. A. L. tourney this year, the league champion, provided it be in good P. I. A. A. standing, being eligible to meet the W. P. I. A. L. victor in a special district game. As neither Schenley nor South Hills is a member of the P. I. A. A., Westinghouse, defeated by will be the team to meet the W. P. I. A. C. champion in a state elimination game March 21. The lineup:

Schenley, 25.		South Hills, 20.
Schmidt	F	Metz
Cales	F	Regan
Crum	C	Dering
Mihm	G	Currie
Friedman	G	Rigg

Substitutions, Schenley—Landau for Friedman, South Hills—Williams for Regan. Field goals, Schmidt 2, Crum 2, Cales 2, Friedman, Dering 5, Metz, Regan, Rigg, Fouls, Schenley, 5 out of 11, South Hills, 4 out of 7. Referee, Bolster.

Forbes

He Attributes Good Showing to Associates

By B. C. FORBES

CHAIRMAN DAVID SARNOFF, of the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, when I congratulated him upon the fact that his company was able to do better last year than it did even in the boom year of 1929, and asked him how it was done, modestly replied:

Mr. Forbes

"I selected a good man for the job as president of RKO. This man is Hiram Brown. He, being a good man himself, in turn also selected good men all around him, and to him and to his men more than to myself belongs the credit for this accomplishment."

Haven't you noticed that very able executives usually have aptitude for selecting able lieutenants? There are some shining exceptions, towering executives who are the whole thing in their organization. But this very often proves an unfortunate arrangement, first, because it tends to limit growth and, second, because no lieutenant stands ready to step into the breach when anything occurs to the dominating one.

Such individualism was more common in the old days than it is now. Many modern corporations are too huge to be managed in every particular by any one man, no matter how able or versatile. Teamwork is essential. Boards of directors now much prefer as chief executive a man who encourages others to advance and assume responsibilities. One-man domination represses initiative.

Mr. Sarnoff manifestly believes in delegating authority. And equally manifestly, it pays.

PRESIDENT L. C. Stowell, of the Dictaphone Sales Corporation, returning to New York after an extensive business trip, makes these interesting observations:

"At Detroit, my first stop, I found a distinctly optimistic feeling. Not only was business good with our own organization, but in talking with other businessmen I found that they were convinced that the business curve is definitely on the upgrade. I had a similar experience at Chicago, where there is, of course, a great diversification of industries. They are preparing for the World's Fair. Optimism is now uppermost in that city.

"Omaha was not quite so cheerful. But Kansas City could be classified with Chicago and Detroit. The prevailing opinion there was that the depression is over. St. Louis does much business with Southern states and counties which are hard hit by the drought, so that sentiment there is not so favorable as at most other points.

"I met a great many railway men during my travels, and, while they are disposed to complain about the treatment accorded to the railroads, they admitted that, although they could not claim any real expansion in traffic, at least the trend was no longer down-grade."

PROFESSIONAL BULLS have again become active in Wall Street. They select certain stocks and mark them up spectacularly. This usually helps the rest of the list.

It is a fact, however, that the most influential financial people are not taking part in such demonstrations. They question the wisdom of excited speculation at this stage. They would rather see a quiet, firm market than a highly-manipulated one. The conservative heavyweights are watching business developments extremely closely. So far they are not convinced beyond shadow of doubt that permanent betterment has taken root. They see a number of encouraging symptoms; but they also see other trends not quite encouraging. Hence, they are adopting the role of Missourians—they want to be shown.

My own guess is that the market is likely to have one more substantial setback before entering a stable, impressive, upward movement.

USUALLY WAGES are reduced during a period of depression. This time wage rates have been astonishingly well maintained. But far more salaries have been cut than the newspapers have recorded. The most common reduction has been 10 per cent., but in some cases it has reached 20 per cent. Inasmuch as the cost of living has decreased at least 10 per cent. no severe hardship has been inflicted.

STOCK MARKET LEADERS PUT ON SKIDS

Losses of 1 to 7 Become Fairly General; Principal Issues Well Taken on Dip

NEW YORK, March 11—(AP.)—Reduction of the dividend of one of the premier trunk line railways took the wind out of bull sails in the stock market today.

Losses of 1 to 7 points or more became fairly general among more active issues as the day wore on, but it was notable that stock was not urgently pressed for sale, and principal issues were well taken on the way down. Reduction of New York Central's annual dividend rate from $8 to $6 on the day succeeding the flotation of a large bond issue came as a surprise to some quarters, although it was well known that current earnings did not support the higher rate, and bankers pointed to the action as a striking commentary on the impregnable credit of this old Vanderbilt road.

The mid-week business statistics were confusing, and traders seeking indications as to trends in the near future were left in a quandry. Particularly difficult to interpret were the mixed opinions expressed by the weekly steel trade reviews.

"Iron Age" reported ingot output at 55 per cent of capacity, against 53 a week previously, the best gain in several weeks. "Steel," on the other hand, said that demand had ebbed during the past week, and operations were only a fraction higher.

Freight car loadings, as reported for the last week in February, reflected the holiday, but index figures of freight movement, making allowance for that and for seasonal trends, showed a decided upturn. The Pennsylvania Railroad reported that car loadings for the first week of March were the best of the year.

The electric power production figures for the first week of March showed a somewhat smaller decline from the like period a year ago than in the preceding week.

The weekly petroleum statistics showed a gain of over 50,000 barrels in daily crude output, and some 1,000,000 barrels in gasoline in storage.

Indication of improving conditions abroad appeared in pronounced strength of the Berlin Boerse and continued gains in Latin-American exchange rates. Silver continued to improve in London.

Radio Corporation's earnings report, showing a striking gain in the final quarter, bore out the more optimistic estimates. American Suger Refining also made a favorable report, showing net of $5.57 a share, despite the troubles in the sugar industry.

Call money came back to 1½ per cent, after renewals at 2.

Stock Exchange Topics

Technical Position of Market Strongest Since 1925

The technical position of securities, as measured by relationship of market values to security loans, is currently stronger than at any time since 1925, which is as far back as comprehensive figures are available. This means greater percentage of stocks and bonds now is owned outright than at any time in the past five years. The official ratio of brokers' loans to total value of listed stocks as published by the New York Stock Exchange was 3.22 per cent on March 1 against 5.89 per cent a year earlier, and the record high of 10.23 per cent on March 1, 1926. This ratio in the past has been a fairly reliable index of technical position of stocks.

"Our total operating revenues for February show a slight improvement over January in that the decline was only 15 per cent from 1930 as compared with a higher percentage decrease in the first month of the year," said J. J. Pelley, president of New Haven Railroad. "I am not able to estimate net results from the figures compiled thus far. From talking with business and industrial leaders, I receive the impression that sentiment is becoming less pessimistic. As to New Haven's traffic, it seems that the declines have about reached their limit and that the decreases are not becoming larger."

McCrory A stock recently has been more active than in some time. That is said to be due to new sponsorship in the issue because of the improvement in sales thus far this year. In January, the volume increased 7.7 per cent over that of the corresponding month last year, and February recorded a gain of 1.3 per cent. Because of good Easter shopping anticipated for this month, March also is likely to record good improvement over the corresponding month a year ago. The company earned $4.08 a share on the stock last year.

A number of market interests have been calling attention to International Salt on the theory that the prospects of that company over the long term must be considered good. Earnings for last year have not been published, but interests in a position to have good information state that the results will exceed those for the preceding 12 months.

As might have been expected, the current heavy speculation in public utility shares is accompanied by a lively flow of gossip on the matter of early consummation of deals which will bring about closer relations among some companies. The choice story at present is a prospective offer by the United Corporation for an exchange of its shares for Consolidated Gas. The gossipers have it that the United Corporation will offer two shares of its common and one share of its preferred for a share of Consolidated Gas, which would work out equivalent to a price of approximately 110 for Consolidated Gas on the present basis of market prices. They also point out that such a deal would give those who exchange their Consolidated Gas a combined dividend of $4.50 a share, as against the present $4 rate in force on that stock. It will be recalled that the Niagara Hudson Corporation, controlled by the same banking interests as United Corporation, recently announced physical interconnection of its properties with those of the big metropolitan utility.

Although Electric Auto-Lite Company failed to earn its $6 dividend last year, results showed $5.32 a share. It is said in well informed quarters that no downward revision will be made in the dividend in the near future. The next quarterly payment will be made April 1. Unless there is a great falling off in business, which is not evident at this time, it is believed that the intention of the management is to continue the present rate even though the dividend in the first quarter of this year may not be quite earned. The future of Electric Auto-Lite is primarily dependent upon the ability of the automobile industry to revive from its present lethargy.

Pennsylvania Nets $5.28 Share in 1930

Despite the unprecedented decrease of more than $118,800,000 in operating revenues of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company last year, the company earned a surplus of nearly $11,500,000 over and above fixed charges, sinking and reserve funds and an 8 per cent dividend, according to the income statement for 1930, made public today.

While net income in 1929 equaled 17.64 per cent on that year's capital stock of $574,756,400, an increase in the capital stock of $77,179,150 in 1930, together with the marked falling off in traffic combined to reduce the net income last year to 10.56 per cent of the capital stock. This was equivalent to $5.28 per share of $50 par value.

Mary Lou Says She Will Continue Deception

CHAPTER XXIII.

Mathews lit a cigar and stretched himself more comfortably in the easy chair. He was happiest of all when alone with Margaret, like this. He lived nearby and had reduced his practice to a very few old patients, havinb accumulated and inherited all the money he, a bachelor of no extravagant tastes, would ever need. He had many leisure hours and spent a great portion of them at Westwood. The remainder of his free time was given to his hobbies, the writing of a book which was to be called "Autobiography of a General Practitioner" and the raising of prize dahlias from seeds, the flowers of which he exhibited, the bulb of which he sold.

"It's late," Mrs. Lorrimer remarked again, and looked at the tiny diamond watch upon her wrist. "Where are they . . .?"

"And who are 'they,' Margaret? You fuss over that boy far too much!"

"Do I? And I try so hard not to," she murmured. "'They' are Travers and Mary Lou, of course . . ."

Larry Understands

"Some day you'll get confused and call her that," he warned.

"No, I don't think so," she told him. "Sometimes I find that's the only way I can remind myself of the true situation by naming her—just to you—Larry Mitchell is here for the week-end, and Jenny Wynne is out with the three of them, they are skating on Willow Pond."

"Mitchell is a nice youngster," commented Mathews.

"Yes—he's terribly smitten with Jenny, poor boy. She treats him outrageously—as she treats everyone."

Presently the four came back from the pond, cold and ruddy, trudging up to the house, the comfort of a hearth fire, and tea, laughing all the way, their boots crunching in the hard, dry snow.

The sun was now setting, red and gold, a glory of celestial fire. Presently the sky would alter to that strange, chill green of winter and the evening star would hang like a silver lamp above the bare aspiring arms of the trees.

"Lovely," said Mary Lou—"lovely . . ."

Her voice broke a little. She had always loved beauty; it had an intimate message for her, but lately, it seemed, it broke her heart.

Larry, with whom she was walking, looked at her quickly.

"Steady on," he murmured, for, it seemed, no good reason.

It wasn't until he spoke that Mary Lou realized there were sudden tears in her eyes.

She blinked them away, and said, defensively, "Well, it is lovely—"

Jenny broke into a little run.

"Golly! I'm frozen," she cried. "Travers, you lazy lump, I'll race you to the house!"

She darted off, slim and straight in her skating suit of scarlet wool, krimmer trimmed. Mary Lou watched her flash along the path between the trees and Lorrimer after her. She remembered how she had raced with him—one day, it seemed very long ago, and yet was just before Christmas.

But since then he had kissed her, under the pale green and amber pearl of the mistletoe; since then she had come to her new wisdom.

Larry said low:

"You're crazy about him, aren't you? Don't be afraid of me, partner. We've always been friends. I understand, you know. You are, aren't you?"

"Yes," she said, quite simply.

"What are you going to do, dear?" he asked her, anxious for her comprehending.

"I don't know. See the farce through. Play the game somehow."

"He's mad about you," Larry said.

"Not me. Delight. The girl he thinks me. Oh, Larry, it's such a miserable tangle!"

Will Act On

"What are you going to do?" he asked her again.

"Play safe, I suppose. Lean backwards." She managed a little, brittle laugh, clear and mirthless. "What else can I do?"

"I don't know. I'm—darned sorry," Larry told her, low. "He's a corker, and you've done wonders for him. Getting those kinks ironed out. Getting him back to normal. And what a normal! For before all this happened to him he was one magnificent youngster. Mary Delight—" he corrected himself. "I've been up to the hospital as he asked me to and seen McEwan, you know, Lorrimer's his god. It's amazing. The stories he told me—"

"Tell me, Larry!" she begged.

"Not now. Haven't time. What about Mac anyway, is Lorrimer getting him out of there?"

"I think so. He and Mrs. Lorrimer have been pulling some wires and expect to send him to the Adirondacks in a few weeks' time," she answered. "It's been the best thing in the world for him—for Lorry—to have that interest."

Larry caught her hand.

"Hurry—we've been mooching along and they've beaten us to the house," he said, straining his eyes for a scarlet skating suit.

"Jenny'll keep!" she laughed.

"Don't kid. This is the real thing," said Larry soberly.

"I know it is. I'm glad. Lucky you," she said, "and lucky Jenny!"

Larry Doubtful

"I'm not so sure about that. She won't be serious. She's met me in town you know, several times. Lunch, at some funny place. Dinner, too, and a show. And I'm out here whenever I can sneak off. But she won't listen, she just laughs."

"That's Jenny's way," said Mary Lou, soothingly. "I wouldn't lose heart."

"Well," said Larry gloomily, "it's all pretty much out of the question, after all, even if she did care anything about me, which she probably doesn't. That girl's like quicksilver! I can't ask her to live on the bountiful earning capacity of a rotten reporter, can I? And I wouldn't live on her money, so that's that. I've got to add to my income somehow. Writing a chapter a year on a novel or a scene every six months of a play won't help much—it will be 20 years. I'll be senile before I get one published and the other produced, and even then they'll probably be flops, if they get that far," he prophesied drearily, "so I'll have to catch me some extra jobs if only to keep her in lunches. She has expensive tastes in food!"

"What kind of a job?" asked Mary Lou.

"Oh, I don't know. I've heard that I can do press agenting for some spring show or other if I want. I'll look into it. Give the kid another seed," said Larry irrepressibly, "every five bucks counts in this depleted exchequer!"

They had reached the house and went in. Lorrimer and Jenny were already there, standing by the fire, thawing themselves out. Peter had arrived with tea and Jenny and Dr. Mathews had started one of their interminable arguments. They were always arguing. And the Doctor was getting the best of it. He had brought Jenny into this vale of tears and was not above reminding her constantly of the fact.

"Laggards!" cried Jenny in her clear voice as the other two entered.

Lorrimer glanced at them, a brief moment. He had been reassured as to the state of Mitchell's affections, and had observed, for himself, Jenny's effect upon that usually volatile young man, but he was unreasonably uneasy in that curious lover-state of being suspended between heaven and earth, or heaven and hades. It was incredible to him that anyone knowing "Delight" should prefer Jenny or should not, at once, succumb beneath the arch of Delight's slender instep.

And Larry was attractive.

Mary Lou, dressed in knickers and with a suede leather skating jacket, looked like a delightful if very effeminate boy. She pulled off her woolen tam and shrugged herself out of the jacket, appearing in a soft brown flannel shirt and gay tie. Her lovely hair shone in the firelight and her cheeks were rosy red with the cold.

"Why is it," asked Jenny, "that, when we skate or ski, Delight always looks like something on the cover of an expensive magazine? Me, I go out, armed for battle and all that and only succeed in getting a red nose. But Delight is red where red should be and white—or, at most, pink—other places. Of course, she hasn't as much nose as I have. What do you think, Dr. Dan?"

"Circulation," answered that gentleman briefly.

"But," said Jenny, triumphantly, "I exercise. I exercise like mad."

"In spurts. The rest of the time you eat too many sweets, smoke too many cigarets, wear too high heels, dance too much and spend too much time in the shops."

"And Delight, I suppose," continued the unabashed Jenny, "is just a simple child of Nature?"

Lorrimer was untying a great parcel of books which had reached Westwood House that afternoon.

"Delight," he said, looking up.

She set down her cup and went over to him. Curious how she had come to hate that name, affected, she thought it, idiotic, the name of a silky, silly girl in a ridiculous novel.

"Yes, Lorry?"

"I wish she wouldn't," remarked Larry to Jenny.

"Wouldn't call him that. I always prick up my ears like an obedient and startled bird dog. Lorry and Larry! Sounds like a couple of the Rollo boys. Too confusing."

"I'll call you Lawrence," offered Jenny brightly.

They were standing together by the fire. Larry dropped his voice and his cup almost followed it.

"That sounds too—formal."

"What do you suggest?" she asked.

"Well," he replied, thoughtfully, "'Lawrence, dearest,' would be nicer still. However, I think 'Lawrence, darling' would be almost good enough."

Jenny shook her yellow curls at him.

"Boy, you go too fast," she murmured.

Over by the big long table against the wall Lorrimer and Mary Lou were looking at the volumes in their bright jackets.

"Lots of reading matter," Lorrimer said. "We can dig ourselves in. Here are the French books you wanted, and the biographies."

"You're crazy about Travers, aren't you?"

DAILY TRUE STORY—Ronny's Clever

"Ronny's clever."

"Fiddlesticks!" retorted Uncle Horace.

Out in the more or less great business world one would not believe that the powerful and dignified G. Horace Maltby ever stooped to such an expression as "Fiddlesticks."

He didn't, out in the more or less great business world, as a matter of fact. But in his own home it was different.

To Carol Jackman he was "uncle" through the biological fact that he was her mother's brother. He was also her guardian, since Carol was an orphan.

"Ronny" was young Mr. Ronald Grey and he wanted to marry Carol, which indicates his excellent judgment.

If Ronny Grey had not wanted to marry Carol she would have felt very badly indeed.

It was a love match.

G. Horace Maltby didn't believe much in love. And he didn't believe at all in Ronny. Maltby was married to a most estimable lady, full of dignity and activity on women's club work. Perhaps that was why he did not believe much in love.

Ignores Young Man

Carol used to stop in at her uncle's magnificently plain and solid office now and then on various errands, which all had the same general object—to induce him to advance some of the income from her estate, to increase the amount he allowed her from this income, or to cut argument short and just ask for some of her money.

Carol usually got it.

She was that sort of a girl and her uncle doted on her.

One day Carol fluttered into the office past a young man who had popped up from his desk outside the private door and asked her what she wished.

"Oh, that's all right. I'll tell Uncle Horace what I wish," she said and breezed past him.

The young man was Ronald Grey, Mr. Maltby's new secretary and guardian of the inner gate to his office. If Carol had been a man he would not have passed Ronny because, despite the way his name sounds, he was tall, muscular and not long from college.

Or if the intruder had been a grim, unattractive elderly lady, Ronny would have barred the way with polite regrets and learned a few things about her business before letting her in.

But with Carol it was different. She almost took Ronny's breath away. Just the smile and twinkle of her eyes and general loveliness of her had him stymied, as it were.

Being new to the job and extremely anxious to hold it, Ronny followed her into Maltby's office.

"That's all right, Grey—my niece is privileged," Maltby said, noting the worried expression on Ronny's face.

Carol turned and smiled at him and this time she noticed that he was no pale, slender, downtrodden white-collar slave. He was, from a girl's viewpoint, rather good to look at.

Inquires About Secretary

"What is his name?" she asked.

"Who?"

"The nice—the new keeper of the drawbridge to your—"

"Grey. Run along, my dear."

Ronny popped to his feet as she came out and held open the gate of the little fence that surrounded his desk.

"Thank you, Mr. Grey," Carol murmured.

Ronny stammered something and Carol departed.

A week later they were calling each other, Mr. Grey and Miss Jackman.

A month later it was "Carol" and Ronny."

And six months later they were very much in love with each other, and admitted it—but only to each other, thus far.

"I must work like the dickens and all, get a promotion and a real salary, Carol," Ronny said.

"That's always nice, Ronny."

"Because I want to be able to take care of you."

"That will always be nice," Carol agreed.

She had never told him about herself or her fortune. Now she was afraid to do so, it might give Ronny "cold feet," he might be afraid to carry on for fear that much talk concerning "fortune-hunters" would be voiced in his direction.

The thing to do, then, would be to help Ronny get a promotion.

And so, one evening at home, Carol remarked to Uncle Horace that Ronny was charming.

"Ronny?"

"Mr. Grey."

"Mister Grey? Oh, you mean young Grey, my secretary. I hadn't noticed that he was charming."

"You wouldn't. But he is, and Ronny's clever, too."

"Fiddlesticks!"

Studies Business

"Ronny's clever. You could promote him just as well as not. He knows a lot of languages and could be your foreign representative, and I'm sure he could be one of your vice presidents, and meet your business people, he is so diplomatic."

"Suppose I retire and turn the business over to him?"

"Don't be sarcastic, Uncle Horace. I really wouldn't expect that."

Ronny did his very best to acquaint himself with every detail of Maltby's business.

He really larned a great deal, a surprising number of things. And so he decided that as long as Maltby didn't see fit to acknowledge his merits and talents and promote him of his own volition, he, Ronny, would go in and ask for the promotion.

He went in and asked for it.

"A raise? A promotion in these times, Grey?" Maltby said, sharply.

"Exactly, Mr. Maltby."

"Haven't you enough to live on?"

"Not when I marry."

"My corporation seldom makes changes or takes on increased expenditures solely to help along a matrimonial venture."

"Not even if a man deserves it?"

"You know, Grey, that I can get a hundred young men to do your work, and do it just as well."

"Now I don't know about that. I doubt if they'd be discreet. I doubt if they'd be as diplomatic, or if they would forego opportunities to demand a lot of things."

"You think pretty well of yourself, don't you?"

Ronny Promoted

"A man wouldn't be much good with an inferiority complex."

"Can't argue—sorry—you'll have to be content or step aside for some other man who would be everlastingly grateful for your job."

"Of course, I can do that, still my diplomacy, my ability to see no evil, speak no evil, hear no evil, ought to be worth a great deal."

"What the devil are you driving at?"

"Such as slipping a memo on your desk the time that Hadley came back from the coast a day ahead and you were planning to take Mrs. Hadley to some rendezvous that night to talk over securities and other business."

G. Horace Maltby stared hard at Ronny, but said nothing.

"And reminding you that Mrs. Maltby's club committee was going to Buffalo that week you planned to go there. And steering Mazie Manners out of here the afternoon that Mrs. Maltby happened to be in your office, and——"

Ronny talked for five minutes longer in the same way.

That night at dinner Uncle Horace said to Carol, "Er—by the way, I've made young Grey our third vice president. It seems that you were right, Carol, Ronny's clever!"

FRISBY HAS PLAN TO KEEP COUNTRY FROM RACKETEERS

WASHINGTON — Congressman Horace Walpole Frisby today declared that he was working on a plan to sell the country back to the Indians.

"Yes, yes, yes," said Frisby, nervously. "Yes, yes, yes."

Pressed for further details, the Congressman jumped up and down, flung his hat in the air, and threw confetti this way and that.

Frisby was seen later by reporters as he peeked through the curtains of his study, and flicked cigar ashes toward the cheering thousands.

The Congressman-at-Large points out that inasmuch as the white man bought the land from the Indians for firewater, it is only fair to sell it back to the Indians for firewater.

Mister Frisby said he had first offered to give the country back to the Indians, but they refused to take it.

Pinchot's Bad Bill

Administration Measure for Abolition of Coal and Iron Police Contains Dangerous Provisions.

Gov. Pinchot's outspoken opposition to the iniquitous coal and iron police system was one of the considerations which led the Sun-Telegraph to support him in his campaign for the governorship.

In fulfillment of his campaign pledge the Governor has had introduced in the Legislature a measure which provides for the policing of corporation property by state police who are to be paid by the corporations.

The measure, if enacted, will carry out the Governor's campaign pledge so far as the letter is concerned, but will fall short of fulfillment so far as the spirit is concerned.

The Sun-Telegraph prefers Representative M. A. Musmanno's bill, which merely replaces the coal and iron police with property guards.

The most dangerous feature of the administration measure is the possibility it offers that the police, although responsible only to the state, will feel more or less under obligation to the corporations that pay their wages, and will, perhaps unconsciously, be influenced to favor them in strikes or other controversies.

In some respects the state police employed in guarding corporation property under the provisions of the Pinchot bill would have wider latitude than is allowed the industrial police under the existing law, and it is not inconceivable that under an unfair Governor they might be used as an instrument for the oppression of the workers, as a strike breaking organization who, with no limit but the state boundaries to the territory in which they might exercise jurisdiction, could be used, as Musmanno well says, as "Cossacks" to trample upon the rights of the people.

The Governor might conceivably create his own private army under the measure.

Musmanno's bill, which gives the industrial corporations property guards whose authority ends after they have left the corporations' premises, meets all legitimate requirements, and is in all important respects immeasurably superior to the administration bill.

Mr. Evans' Charges

It Is Gratifying to Note That Director Lang Welcomes an Investigation.

Henry Oliver Evans, former city controller, charges that not only the Department of Supplies but also the Department of Public Works is squandering the taxpayers' money.

He says mismanagement has resulted in the expenditure of $1,100,000 more on paving improvements during the last three years than was called for in the estimates of the city engineers.

Mr. Evans' charges merit careful attention not only because his work as city controller gave him an exceptionally good opportunity to observe what was going on, but because his judgment, previously expressed, in regard to extravagances, has been amply vindicated.

It was Henry Oliver Evans who made it possible for the city to recover almost $500,000 through exposure of "irregularities" in the collection of garbage. And it is worthy of note that he called attention months ago to the "irregularities" in the Supplies Department.

It is gratifying to note that Director Lang, of the Public Works Department, who dismissed Mr. Evans' charges, when they were first called to his attention, with the remark that he did not care to enter into a controversy with him, thought better of it later and now announces that he will welcome an investigation. That is both the prudent and the honorable attitude to assume when such accusations as Mr. Evans' are made.

An Illogical Statement

Gov. Pinchot's Defense of His Refusal to Consent to Change in Blue Law Fails to Impress.

Gov. Pinchot has come out against any change in the Blue Law of 1794, that antiquated statute governing Sabbath observance which every Pennsylvanian habitually or occasionally violates.

The Governor's stand in the matter is a disappointment. The Sun-Telegraph is inclined to suspect that his opposition to any change is due to pressure exercised by illiberal religious bodies rather than to Mr. Pinchot's personal convictions.

A Sunday baseball game is illegal under the Blue Law. It is doubtful if Gov. Pinchot sees any harm in a game of tennis or golf played on Sunday. Yet what difference is there, in principle, between a game of tennis or golf, played by the well-to-do on Sunday without interference, and the Sunday sandlot baseball game which the police feel called upon to raid?

It would be interesting to learn how often Gov. Pinchot has played tennis on Sundays.

The statement with which Pinchot undertakes to support his position is weak and illogical. He virtually says that the name of Pennsylvania is a hissing and a by-word because of the corruption of its political machines, and in the same breath defends the state's virtue because of its adherence to the Blue Law.

The proof of the pudding is the eating, and the best test of whether the Blue Law makes for public morals or public welfare lies in a comparison between conditions in a state which enforces it and states which have abolished it.

Pennsylvania is the only state represented in the major leagues which outlaws Sunday baseball. Can anyone honestly contend that in respect to public morals or public welfare Pennsylvania is so far ahead of Massachusetts, New York, the District of Columbia, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois and Missouri as might be reasonably expected if the Blue Law is such a desirable act as its defenders assert? The answer is, of course, in the negative.

Positive evidence is not lacking that the people in the liberal states are happier and better off, because of being allowed innocent recreation on Sunday, than the people of Pennsylvania, for whom participation in innocent amusements on the one day free to the workers is a crime.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND.

Admit It—And Forget It!

The most difficult feat on earth is to induce any human being to admit the TRUTH about himself. Or herself.

Did you ever know a man who would admit that he was foolish? Or that he was drunk? Or that he was slow, or lazy, or too old to have an eye for the women?

Did you ever know a woman who would admit that she was actually fat? Or unreasonable? Or over 45? Or wrong in an argument?

* * *

Dodging the facts about ourselves takes up half of our spare time and most of our nervous energy. And long after we have ceased to deceive our mirrors or our friends, we keep right on blithely lying to ourselves.

* * *

A man will go on for years growing deafer and deafer, missing half the fun in life, permitting his family to shout themselves into tonsilitis, yet refusing to wear an ear-trumpet. Because an ear-trumpet would be an ADMISSION that he was deaf.

* * *

A woman will go on for years "touching up" her gray hairs, squinting her eyes, to avoid wearing glasses, and looking like a comic valentine, when a lovely head of silver hair and a pair of nifty oxfords would make her look 10 years younger. But, THAT would be admitting "middle age."

Why Pollyanna yourself when it's so much easier to ADMIT the truth—and then forget it?

* * *

Everything has its compensations, once you admit it—even poverty.

* * *

Middle age may rob you of a lot of the amusements of youth, but it offers you many consolations and comforts and privileges. Such as the right to wear comfortable shoes and woolen understockings in winter, to refuse to go out on account of your hairdo, and to go home early from dull parties. It's a cinch.

* * *

ADMITTING that you are wrong in an argument ends the argument and saves your breath and your friend-hip.

* * *

And the man who answers his wife's accusation with "Yes I'm drunk, honey—what are you gonna do about it?" wins the fight. There is no answer to THAT.

EADS, MASTER ENGINEER

By Archibald Henderson

When the deans of American engineering schools selected the leading engineers of all time, they chose two Americans out of the five: Leonardo da Vinci, James Watt, Ferdinand de Lesseps, James B. Eads and Thomas A. Edison. Although the work of Eads is not so spectacular nor so epochal as that of the others, it represents the highest achievements of the era during which Eads flourished. The ironclads which he built helped to decide the issue of the war between the states, and inaugurated the era of the modern ironclad, already foreshadowed by the Merrimac and the Monitor. The superb engineering structure, the Eads Bridge at St. Louis, represents the greatest engineering feat of that sort, up to his time. Into it were wrought the conquest of difficulties believed by many to be impossible to overcome.

In the realm of literature, we associate Mark Twain with the Mississippi River. In science, and in particular, in the realms of engineering, we likewise associate Eads with the "Father of Waters." Like Mark Twain, but in a profounder way, he studied the mighty river, with the purpose of learning it, both on and beneath the surface. As has been significantly said, Eads was bred to the Mississippi; he mastered its secrets by hard experience, he worked in successful opposition to its great wayward forces and to some extent he conquered it.

James Buchanan Eads was born in Lawrenceburg, Ind., on May 23, 1820. At the age of 13, in company with his mother and two sisters, he went to St. Louis. At first he worked as a dry-goods store clerk; and later, aboard a river steamer. The great river laid upon him its spell; and especially was he impressed by its destructive force. The many craft which were sunk as the result of its force; the depredation wrought by its violence; the need for salvaging the wrecks and for harnessing the great force of nature received his closest attention and study.

The beginning of his career as engineer dates from the time when he went into business with a firm of boat-builders. The duty which he allotted to himself was a study of the river, with reference to the raising of sunken craft. By his engineering skill and his inventive genius, he succeeded in devising ingenious means for accomplishing his purposes. A stretch of 1,200 miles of the river was his field of study. He came to know this from end to end, from top to bottom. He wanted to clean the channels of the Mississippi, Missouri, Ohio and Arkansas rivers; but he was unable to secure the passage of the bill through Congress.

During the War between the States he built eight gun boats which, under Admiral Foote, aided in forcing the upper Mississippi. Moreover he built turreted gun boats, motar boats, and other vessels. Various inventions are credited to him.

The great bridge he built at St. Louis is his chief monument. It marked an era in bridge building. In 1884, Eads received the Albert medal awarded him by the British Society for the Encouragement of Arts, Manufacturers and Commerce.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Mahatma Gandhi is a tiny old man. He weighs only 96 pounds and is very frail. He has two teeth, weak eyes, wears only a loin cloth. He looks like a big bird and lives much like one, sleeping on the bare ground, munching corn and raisins. He says very little, and the little he does say is all about peace and against violence.

Yet it is doubtful if there is in this world today another man as powerful as this small, withered creature. He is raising Cain with the British government in India and millions of Indians, literally hang upon his words. Why this miracle?

There is no miracle. Gandhi has discovered the oldest and simplest truth on earth—yet the most powerful when put into action. He has discovered the secret of freedom. He has discovered that it is within the power of any man to be free if he really wants to be free and will pay the price of freedom.

The Indians complain that the British have power over them. They have rebelled — held bloody mumbles — all in vain.

"Stop rebelling!" says Gandhi. Stop fighting and think. Why have the British power over you? Because you depend on them and on the things they make . . . and because you fear them. Stop depending and stop fearing and no man will have power over you. Stop wanting things — make the few things for yourself which you do want. Stop fearing — either abuse or imprisonment or death itself. Then other men can do nothing for you or to you and you will stand alone — you will be free. Look at me. See how free I am."

The Indians look. They see little, old man Gandhi sitting naked in the sun, munching nuts, spinning thread. He does not need to sit naked. He could wear velvet robes encrusted with jewels. He does not need to eat nuts. The richest vivands of the Orient are his to command. He does not need to spin. Thousands of men would gladly slave for him, relieve him of every labor.

BUT GANDHI ISN'T GOING TO LET HIMSELF FALL INTO THAT TRAP.

He knows that when you accumulate things, you are in bondage to those things. No fine robes, no splendid houses for him! He knows that when you depend on the labor of other men, you become helpless and your strength departs from you. EVERY TIME YOU NEED A THING, EVERY-TIME YOU ACCEPT A SERVICE, YOU BECOME A LITTLE MORE BOUND, A LITTLE MORE HELPLESS—

Gandhi, putting things away, refusing Service, has found the secret of Freedom. And he's teaching it to the Indians.

It's a pity he can't move over and spread some of his teachings here. We need it. We Americans are as much in bondage as the Indians. The British no longer rule us, but something much more subtle and dangerous than British force is over us. Our own love of Things is over us.

No people on earth love Things as the Americans love them. No people on earth have so many Things—work so hard for them—depend so much upon them—worry so over them. We call it "The High Standards of Living" . . . Some people call it "Keeping Up With the Joneses."

Steadily our desire for Things increases. The more Things we have, the harder we work to get still more—the more we fear to lose them. We have no time to loaf, no time to play, no time to think—THINGS OWN US.

Gandhi sitting naked in the sun, spinning his own thread, owns nothing but a loin cloth, a pair of specs and a handful of nuts, HAS LIBERTY.

Our grandfathers, tilling wilderness soil, wearing homespun, living in log houses, HAD LIBERTY.

How much liberty has America today? How much have YOU?

A Sap[illegible] Expedition

Although National [illegible] Is Much Too Weak at Present, Republican [illegible] Plan to Make It Worse.

By JAMES T. WILLIAMS, JR.

Tempted by the ease with which they scuttled the Navy during the Seventy-first Congress just ended, the leaders of the Republican party are going to try to organize the Seventy-second Congress, which assembles next December, into a sapping expedition against the Army.

Having reduced to a scrap of paper their platform pledge to build up the Navy to treaty strength, the leaders of the Republican party are preparing to make another scrap of paper of the National Defense Act, which specifies what the peace-time strength of the Army shall be.

Under the National Defense Act, the established military policy of the United States is to provide for a peace-time regular Army of 165,000 men, and a peace-time National Guard of not less than 210,000 men.

Although this is the strength called for by law, the Republican party has already begun the nullification of that law by refusing to build up either the regular Army or the National Guard to the peace-time strength which the law authorizes and the military needs of this country imperatively require.

It is the Republican party whose leaders in recent years have reduced the regular Army to 118,750 men, and the National Guard to 190,000 men.

Deduct from this strength to which the regular Army has been reduced the units absolutely necessary to garrison our many posts, guard our frontiers, and train the civilian components of the Army of the United States, and what is left?

Only 53,954 men that can be assembled in one force capable of taking the field on the outbreak of war.

Only enough artillery to furnish 10 per cent of the strength required for harbor defense when war begins.

This is all that the Republican party has left of combat troops ready for immediate field service in the event of a national emergency.

So severely has the National Guard also suffered at the hands of the Republican party that a large part of this force could not possibly respond promptly for field service in case of war.

And the organized reserves are now in such a disorganized condition, and so far below the minimum strength necessary in case of an emergency, that this force would not be available for months after war came.

Meantime equipment, armament and munitions for the regular Army have been reduced far below the reserve required to meet the immediate needs of a national emergency. Our military authorities have repeatedly protested against this reckless policy, but their protest has been ignored and suppressed.

Nevertheless and notwithstanding, the Republican leadership is about to make a secret study of new reductions that it can make in the regular Army, National Guard and organized reserves without interfering with pork-barrel projects or stepping on the toes of pork-barrel politicians.

When this secret study is completed, it will doubtless be turned over to the new delegation that is about to be sent to Geneva to participate in a conference on the reduction of land armaments.

Whether the new Congress will permit the Army to be exploited for the political purposes of the Republican party in the way that the Navy was exploited by the same party for the same purposes during the last Congress, is for the plain people of this country to say.

If their newly-elected Senators and Representatives will begin now to expose the sapping expedition against the regular Army, which the leaders of the Republican party are now organizing, public sentiment can be mobilized in time to save the Army from the unhappy fate which the Navy suffered by the surrender of the Republican leadership to the international bankers and their dupes.

The regular Army is gagged. Its leaders are unable to call a halt upon these political sappers. But the National Guard and the organized reserves are not helpless. They are not gagged. And they ought not to be idle between now and the time the new Congress meets.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, March 11.—New York debutantes are no longer the carefully sheltered hot-house flowers. Nor coy maids with eyes cast so demurely down. They have been places and seen things long before their official "coming out" party. And enter the room with a whoop.

Formerly nothing more potent than claret lemonade was served at a debut. Today they are likely to start festivities with "side cars." Indeed, there is a story that at one affair this winter a slightly weaving and bleary debbie could only mumble her greetings.

The new democratization does not apply solely to the debbie, for society itself as an institution has lost much of its snobbishness. There is no longer a social bell cow. The carefully selected Four Hundred is way up in the thousands and growing.

At the most exclusive function there is usually a sprinkling of stage and screen stars along with the latest illicit caper cutting Don Juan. Many rich society boys carry around court jesters who go into their clowning when things become a little dull.

The best man at the wedding of a rich society youth recently was a writer of humor and the bridesmaid was a comedienne in a musical comedy. Smart social dinners are not always given in de luxe cafes, but often in some popular side street speak-easy.

The most successful bal masque of the winter was sponsored by Vera Maxwell, a sort of female Harry Lehr, whose bubbling conviviality is so well known around the cocktail room of the Paris Ritz and along the French and Italian Rivieras. Miss Maxwell is not in the Social Register.

Once upon a time the stateliest and most exclusive dinners were given by such elegants as Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt and Mrs. William Waldorf Astor. Then, too, there was the widely heralded Bradley Martin Ball. Such stiff affairs are no longer favored. Society considers them deadly monotonous.

Anna May Wong, the Chinese actress, is becoming one of the Broadway toasts, adding the touch Oriental and a tinkling laugh to the gathering of sophisticates. Miss Wong is reputedly adept at the smart retort and her evening gowns cause many heads to turn.

Floyd Gibbons' immaculate white eye patch is not a forced symbol of his courage in action. He would have long ago substituted a glass eye for the one he lost at Chateau Thierry had it not been the lower lid was shot away.

In a cafe today a cigaret smoking flapper yelled to a passing boy friend: "You are a fine piece of zero standing me up last night. You are a bum and that's in italics."

Bugs Baer started out a sport page artist and became one of the keenest paragraphers. His life otherwise is a clutter of contradictions. He scarcely ever reads periodicals devoted to his metier—humor. Instead he reads heavy classical tomes. While frequently seen were kilowatts are thickest, he is often seen in the state, gloom of museums and art galleries. He can discuss Lucius Sergius Cataline, Lola Montez or Mahomet as informally as he can discuss Ted Healy, Jimmy Durante or Tex Guinan. Like most humorists, his expression is dour, but he knows how to laugh at the other fellow's joke. And when he laughs he roars.

Ice skating has never been an uncontrollable passion. In fact anyone wanting my skates, used twice, can make a trade almost any day up to 3 o'clock p. m., by any of the various times. Yet ice skating grows in popularity yearly in New York. New rinks spring up daily with waiting lines and an invention now makes it possible to flood a room in any home and have ice skating as quickly as tea is brewed. Incidentally, until coming to New York I had the fixed idea the Winter Garden was a skating rink.

From an editorial: "Nine out of 10 happy people fairly breathe a perfume of joyousness, but the tenth is likely to be tight-lipped."

Maybe No. 10 has halitosis.
